The Carmel Pine Cone

and Carmel Valley Outlook

OUR 71ST YEAR, NO. 36 September 5, 1985

CRASHING WAVES and turbulent skies are trademarks of the rugged Big Sur coastline during late fall and winter when rain and fog combine to give an aura of surreal beauty.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. While there is no limit on length, brevity is encouraged. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address and signature. A phone number is needed for verification only. Anonymous letters are not accepted, but names of letter writers may be withheld upon request.

Ban on pornography

Dear Editor:

I have formed a committee of interested citizens desiring to rid our communities of filth and other abominations that are being perpetrated upon our innocent children and adults.

Those that would like to join this cause, I am requesting your much-needed assistance, please write to me at Citizens for Decency Through Law, P.O. Box 223079, Carmel, CA 93922 Attn. Harry R. Clark.

Our first project is to present to the cities of the Monterey Peninsula and county an anti-pornography ordinance. Pornography has brought irreparable damage to the lives of our children, marriages and the younger generation.

As a Christian I for one am tired of sitting in the pew watching sin become a dominant force in our nation. God is calling for the Christians to rise up and set a new standard of godliness in our country. Won't you join me? Now.

Sincerely
Harry R. Clark

Projections off base

Dear Editor:

Before Carmel and the other cities of the AMBAG area panic over projected population growth figures for the various cities and unincorporated areas of the county as reported in Aug. 15's Pine Cone, they should do a little historical review.

Reference to the Monterey Peninsula Herald of Oct. 27, 1961 will bring to their attention an article entitled "Area Planners See 'Peninsula 1985,'" In this report the firms involved in the prediction of population growth reported that by 1985 the peninsula "may expect a population of 215,000...." and that Carmel and vicinity would be around 18,000 while the county as a whole might have one million people.

Needless to say, these projects of what "may" occur are somewhat wide of the mark of what did occur some 24 years later. Will the prognosticators for AMBAG be any more accurate in their guesstimates of county population figures for 2005?

Socialist leanings

Dear Editor:

The Rev. Jerry Falwell called the Anglican Bishop of Johannesburg, Desmond Tutu, a "phony," and all of American liberalism went into orbit.

Well, Falwell did qualify his accusation by explaining that only if Bishop Tutu claims that he represents the blacks of South Africa, is he a "phony."

That need not necessarily make Bishop Tutu a "phony." There are many of Bishop Tutu's endeavors that I would judge the Nobel Prize winner as being right on target.

Take for instance the speech that Tutu reportedly delivered before the Sixth Assembly of the World Council of Churches held in Vancouver, B.C. in July and August of 1983. On that occasion, Bishop Tutu reportedly said: "I find capitalism quite horrendous and unacceptable. I am a socialist." (See The Christian Beacon, Collingsworth, New Jersey, Dec. 13, 1984.) Well, the Bishop should know.

Match up Tutu's revelations with charges made by another South African black bishop, the bishop of South Africa's largest black church, the Independent Reformed Church Association, a church of 4½ million blacks, and led by Bishop Isaac Bayite Mokoena.

Quoting directly from The Christian Beacon, 12-13-84: "Bishop Mokoena worked with Tutu in the South African Council of Churches. His discovery that Tutu was working for Communist ends led Bishop Mokoena to sever his connections with that Council, and he joined in exposing Bishop Tutu's alignment with the Communists."

You've got to admit, we never heard that on the six o'clock news.

Why is he running?

Dear Editor:

Do you wonder why Nick Lombardo is running again for the Board of Directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD)? Some recent correspondence gives a clue.

When the MPWMD asked permission to put a small weather station near the maintenance building on Lombardo's golf course, Rancho Canada, it got turned down. According to a June 11 letter from Lombardo's son and attorney, "There is currently a very serious dispute between the Water Management District and the property owners of the Carmel Valley concerning water rights..." that made this bit of cooperation with the MPWMD impossible.

If Lombardo's legal conflict with the MPWMD is so severe that he can't let it measure air temperature, relative humidity, solar radiation and wind speed on his property, how can he ask to serve on its Board of Directors?

Thanks to voters

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center, I would like to thank the voters of Carmel Valley for their approval of the new Carmel Valley Park and Recreation Department.

The excellent percentage of ballots that were returned, plus the large majority voting favorably on the District indicate a great deal of public appreciation for the Community Center and its services.

With the additional revenue that the district will provide, plus the leadership of a fine new Park District Board, the future of the center and its programs appears bright. On behalf of the C.V.C.Y.C. Board of Directors, we wish to thank you for helping to bring our dreams for the center to reality.

I would like to encourage all the residents of the area to attend the new Park District Board meetings and to provide direction to the board as they organize and begin their task of administering the district.

EDITOR'S DESK

BY MAC McDONALD

More than just another tourist?

MY FIRST experience with Carmel more than 11 years ago came — as it has for thousands of others — as a tourist.

Of course I had no inkling then that I would one day be sitting here banging out an editorial for the hometown newspaper. My concerns were probably a little more mundane than that, more along the lines of what color souvenir T-shirt to buy or whether my mustache would ever grow in. (It did.)

When I finally moved to the peninsula in 1982, lured by a job in journalism, I stayed in Carmel with friends who lived on Dolores Street. I admit I was a little perplexed when, giving directions, they said they lived on Dolores, "between Ninth and 10th, on the left-hand side going south, the gold house with the peach — no, it's more of a salmon — door." Say, folks, why not just give me the street number?

"Carmel doesn't have street numbers," came the terse reply.

"Oh," I shot back feebly. "Then how does the mailman know where to deliver the mail?"

"Carmel doesn't have mailboxes," they said almost matter-of-factly.

"Oh."

Later, when I arrived, I found out that Carmel doesn't have a lot of little things that other towns come to take for granted, like sidewalks, (except in the downtown area), streetlights, no traffic lights to speak of, no live music at night, no public restrooms except at the beach, heck, not even a chamber of commerce. Now I find there are no ice cream cones.

But I did find out that Carmel does have quite a few trees and its own city forester, a carefree ambiance, a tough-minded and politically aware citizenry, as well as skads of restaurants, galleries, theaters and little shops, a great beach, and of course the Carmel Mission. Oh, and a lot of tourists.

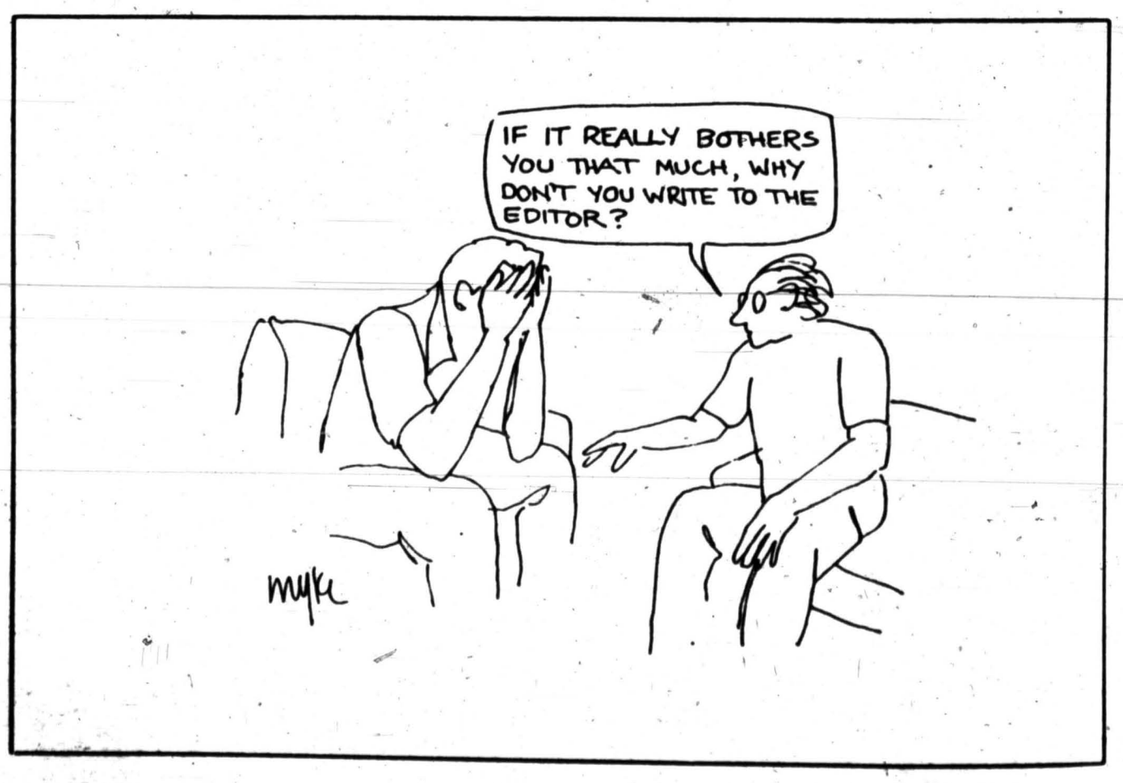

I lived on Dolores — at the "Salmon Door" — for a month, competing for sofa space with Max the Wonder Dog while searching for a place to live on the peninsula, no small task. Max and I had a tacit agreement: he could have the whole sofa all day if he wanted to, but when it was time for we humans to go to sleep, it was off to the floor for him. He did get confused a few times, but quickly conceded after a few "I-thought-we-had-an-agreement, dogbreath" looks.

I did find a place, "on the other side of the hill," as they say, but I liked what I saw in Carmel. And I'm discovering more and more about it every day on the job.

So by now you're probably wondering what all this has to do with anything. I suppose it's time for you to find out who's writing this rambling tract. So herein, everything you ever wanted to know about me, but were too busy doing more important things to ask:

Born in Japan ...half Irish and half Japanese ...former editor of the Pacific Grove-Pebble Beach Tribune ...U.S. Navy veteran ...photographer ...Cal Poly San Luis Obispo journalism alumnus ...went to college with Weird Al Yankovic ...two brothers, one sister, a mom and a dad ...has lived in Japan, Maine, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Florida and some place called Point Mugu ...runner ...lives in a place affectionately called "El Hoyo Funky" (don't ask) ...single ...33 years old, but doesn't act it (or doesn't want to at least) ...bears a slight resemblance to Groucho Marx.

There you have it. After 11 years and a lot of mileage I find myself back on the streets of Carmel, in many ways still a tourist. But hopefully, not for long.

On sale of Mission Ranch Resort

'We're open to almost any kind of suggestion'

By MICHAEL GARDNER

MISSION RANCH Corp. partners are willing to discuss any proposals for the purchase of the resort property, but as it stands now their first priority is to proceed with plans for a 61-unit single-family residential project.

That is according to Mission Ranch Corp. spokesman Doug Tuck, who discussed the project plans with the Carmel Pine Cone/-Carmel Valley Outlook last week.

Tuck was on vacation and unavailable for comment when news leaked that the Frohman Academy and the city of Carmel have expressed a more than passing interest in acquiring the resort just outside the city limits, southwest of Carmel Mission.

Under that proposal the Frohman Academy, a Pacific Grove-based musical theater education organization, would buy the resort buildings to use as its headquarters, production stage and classrooms.

The city of Carmel would obtain an approximately $500,000 grant from the state Coastal Conservancy to buy the wetlands area that could be set aside as a protected wildlife habitat.

Tuck said his partners are interested in the proposal but so far there hasn't been a concrete offer to consider.

"That all sounds great but we don't have an offer in," Tuck said. "Certainly the Frohman Academy has talked to us. I get quite a bit of talk, but that's all we get.

"We're open to almost any kind of suggestion. We're not adamant about anything."

Tuck, who said he could not reveal any financial details of the talks, said Mission Ranch Resort is not officially on the market.

"It's definitely not actively on the market. It's not officially on the market," he said.

Mission Ranch Resort currently includes motel units, tennis courts, a restaurant, piano bar and the barn, which has been used for concerts and social events.

Tuck said his partners would prefer to proceed with plans for a 61-unit subdivision on about eight acres of the 20-acre property.

"Twelve acres is going to be open space. I think that's a large point a lot of people don't realize," he said.

"We would prefer to build homes there. That's what the neighbors want. The property is zoned for single-family homes and that's what we want to put in there.

'IF WE can find a solution to take care of all needs and all concerns, we certainly would listen," Tuck continued.

MISSION RANCH Resort (above) could be developed as a 61-unit subdivision. Then again, it may be purchased by the Frohman Academy with the help of a state Coastal Conservancy grant that may be obtained by the city of Carmel. (Photograph courtesy of Roger Fremier.)

Mission Ranch Resort has appealed a court decision that requires the county to prepare another review of the wetlands area to determine how much should be set aside for an environmental habitat.

The city of Carmel, which filed the initial lawsuit, wants between eight and 11 acres set aside as protected wetlands.

Mission Ranch Corp. has offered to set aside 4.68 acres.

Tuck believes there is a misunderstanding over the reason why the corporation is fighting the wetlands acreage decision.

County zoning density laws would not allow 61 units if there are less than about 16 acres (minus 4.68 acres of wetlands) available for development, Tuck said.

Mission Ranch Corp., even with 16 acres available, will construct the subdivision on 8.25 acres not considered wetlands by either the company's or the city's definition, Tuck said.

"Nothing is going to be built in the wetlands," he promised.

The city also has protested the subdivision because of possible traffic, water supply and sewage capacity problems.

Tuck says the project environmental impact report (EIR) addresses those issues.

"The EIR shows there will be less traffic generated by our proposed development than what is being generated by our present use," he said.

Tuck said water supply and sewage capacity are "legitimate concerns," but pointed out that the resort already uses a lot of water and sewage capacity so any new development will not have a dramatic impact on those resources.

Beach walkway moves one step closer to reality

A BEACH front walkway that will put an end to the constant pedestrian-vehicle obstacle course on Scenic Road is one step closer to reality this week.

The Carmel Beach Rehabilitation Task Force approved the design Thursday, Aug. 29, which calls for a walkway of decomposed granite, prepared by consultant Robert Royston.

The next step is the planning commission within the next few weeks to conduct a public information session on the walkway plans and make available the still-being-prepared environmental impact report (EIR).

The city council has final authorization over the design of the walkway, which will be between five and six feet wide and stretch from Eighth Avenue to the south city limits near Martin Way.

PEDESTRIANS have to battle parked and sometimes moving cars along Scenic Road. However, the constant conflict between car and walker may be resolved by next year as the city continues with its plans to build a walkway along Scenic Road. (Alan McEwen photo.)

If plans proceed according to schedule, construction on the walkway and accompanying landscape plans — estimated to cost about $850,000 — will begin in early 1986.

About 52 parking spaces along Scenic Road will be eliminated. In addition, most other parking spaces will be clustered to avoid a continual stream of parked cars near the walkway.

New access stairways will be constructed. At the bottom of each set of stairs will be a rinse off area. Public restrooms are not incorporated in the proposed design.

There will be a few wooden-fenced areas for safety reasons in spots where the walkway is too close to the banks.

Following are some of the block by block highlights of the proposed design:

• Eighth to Ninth avenues: The parking lot at the foot of Eighth Avenue is to disappear and be replaced by landscaping. The power poles will be undergrounded.

Between Eighth and Ninth avenues the city vehicle access ramp will remain. A little farther south the sand will be pushed right to the street so that the disabled and elderly do not have far to go to enjoy the beach. Handicapped parking will be provided there.

•

LANDSCAPING will be planted to keep the sand from blowing on Scenic Road.

Ninth to 10th avenues: A new stairway is to be constructed here. Clustered parking will be provided.

Two stairways will be constructed on both sides of the 10th Avenue seawall with protectors to steer the waves away from the access points.

The path will loop around the little peninsula to provide one of the most spectacular views of the area.

• 10th to 11th avenues: This is the first sign of a fence just south of 10th Avenue. The guardrail is 42 inches high.

• 11th to 12th avenues: The existing stairway will remain unchanged and there are two wood fences as the path meanders near the cliffs. Just at 12th Avenue there currently is a center divider in the middle of Scenic Road with a Cypress tree.

The tree will remain, but the west side will be landscaped for use as the walkway while cars will only travel on the east side of the divider.

• 12th to 13th avenues: The stairway that was destroyed will be replaced. The walkway extends around a bend and will be moved closer to the ocean so landscaping can be planted to serve as a buffer between the pedestrian and vehicle. Similar plans extend just past 13th Avenue.

• Santa Lucia Avenue to Martin Way: The path will proceed south, but also a side loop is incorporated in the plan to take pedestrians to the Frank Lloyd (the deceased councilman) memorial bench, which offers a superb view of the beach and Pebble Beach looking north.

• Martin Way to the south city limits: This is where the city plans a formal handicapped access with special parking arrangements for the disabled. A wheelchair ramp also will be constructed to take the disabled down to the beach at the foot of Martin Way.

Teachers say what a difference year makes, settle early for 4%

TEACHERS FILE out after voting Tuesday morning to accept a 4 percent wage increase. Teachers say the early settlement and end of the turmoil of last year have renewed their enthusiasm for the coming school year. (Michael Gardner photo.)

TEACHERS ARMED with a contract settled a day before school began and relieved that the recall turmoil ended in a victory for them, went back to the classroom yesterday with a renewed sense of enthusiasm.

The mood was jubilant at the annual pre-year orientation session at Carmel Middle School Tuesday morning as teachers and other district staff members munched on donuts, sipped coffee and orange juice, and caught up with the events of the past summer.

Teachers had ample reason to be in a good mood. Members of the Association of Carmel Teachers (ACT) voted 73-3 to accept a compromise with the school board that grants staff a 4 percent pay increase.

The agreement was reached 10 days after serious negotiations had begun. Teachers had asked for a 6 percent raise and trustees countered with a 2 percent offer.

Teachers received a 4 percent salary hike in 1984-85, but that contract was not signed until the last month of school and was retroactive to July 1, 1984.

In addition to the pay increase, the new contract states that teachers will receive a percentage of any ending balance monies more than $275,000.

CARMEL HIGH School Dave Chaney makes a point to River School teacher Steve Taylor minutes after the Association of Carmel Teachers voted 73-3 to accept a 4 percent pay hike. (Michael Gardner photo.)

The mood this year is far different than the bitterness over the turmoil of 1984-85 caused by the long contract dispute and the eventually-successful recall campaign against former board members Robert Fenton, James Yates and Susan Bromfield.

Most teachers supported the recall.

ACT President Jim Agan, who is a teacher at the high school, explained the reasons behind an early agreement this way:

"I think we negotiated in an atmosphere of respect and were working hard to bring back trust in the negotiating system. I think both sides tried very hard."

"Ditto," interjected Supt. Robert Infelise. "The new superintendent is impressed by the professionalism of the staff," Infelise said of himself.

Agan continued: "Generally we appear to be moving in a positive directon. I think there's a sense most people feel that it's going to be a good year."

Other staff members who talked to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook bubbled with enthusiasm.

"I have a lot of optimism," said River School teacher Steve Taylor. "I think we'll have a great year. We have an excellent staff, excellent budget for the classroom, excellent parent support, a fresh board and a fresh superintendent.

•

High school teacher Dave Chaney said: "I have a good attitude going into this year. Things have changed that's changed my attitude toward this coming year."

High school teacher Buzz Rainer said this year is going to be "the best...I'm looking forward to it with great enthusiasm, energy and all of those cliches."

"I'm very hopeful," explained River School teacher Patrick Allan. "I think there's going to be a dramatic change if this (the contract vote) is any indication. I'm looking forward to it."

And middle school Principal Frank Lynch added: "It's a new beginning. That's all I can say. We're excited. People are ready to go."

Carmel High gets tough on truancy, smoking and drugs

JOE FELDEISEN, principal; and Dee Dresser, assistant principal; are the new administrative team at Carmel High School. (Michael Gardner photo.)

CARMEL HIGH School students curious for a quick hint about the personality and philosophy of their new assistant principal Dee Dresser need not look any farther than on the walls of her office.

On one wall above the couch is a hanging inscribed with the words "There are two lasting gifts we can give our children. One is roots — the other wings."

But not all is educational seriousness to her. Dresser also brings with her a sense of humor, evidenced by the poster by the door that states: "All people bring joy to this room — some by entering, some by leaving."

Dresser, the former middle school assistant principal, has replaced Joe Feldeisen, who is the new principal replacing Marsha Kading Kelly, who resigned to open her own education consulting firm.

In a brief interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook between the hectic schedule of getting ready for opening day Sept. 4, Dresser and Feldeisen discussed some of the changes at the school this year.

Two of the most noticeable changes for students will be the parking and smoking policies.

The school board recently approved a plan which requires students to pay $10 per year for a parking space. Each student will be assigned a numbered parking space. Seniors will have priority, followed by juniors.

The spaces in the upper campus area will be reserved for staff parking.

This week students also will vote on a proposal to eliminate the smoking area over by the gym. The advisory vote then will be presented to the school board Sept. 10 for consideration.

Trustees in August appeared to support elimination of the smoking area when presented with a special staff-student committee recommendation to close it.

However, the board thought it would be a good idea to ask students what they think before final action is taken.

If the ban is approved, students caught smoking on campus will have to attend Saturday study sessions. A second violation will bring a suspension and the third time a student is caught he will be expelled from campus for the remainder of the semester.

The proposed policy is a continuation of last year's get-tough stand on truants and those who drink and take drugs on campus.

Truants must attend Saturday study sessions. A second and third violation brings a suspension and the fourth unexcused absence calls for expulsion for the semester.

•

STUDENTS found to be in possession of drugs and alcohol do not get second chances. One violation and they're expelled for the semester.

Feldeisen predicts a stabilization in enrollment this year after a declining attendance trend.

Early projections marked attendance at 815, however Feldeisen anticipates an enrollment of between 830 and 840. Enrollment was 840 last year.

Enrollment is important because schools receive state funds based on the average daily attendance (ADA) figures.

Feldeisen, a product of private schools and a former private school vice principal, explains the end of the declining enrollment trend this way:

"It's getting expensive to attend private schools, no doubt about it. A kid can get a better education at Carmel High School if the kid is serious about the academics."

Feldeisen reminded that a private consulting firm ranked CHS as the 20th best high school in the state.

Despite monetary difficulties, no courses were eliminated this fall from last year's schedule, he said. Economics has also been added.

The music program this year will be operated through the Frohman Academy.

In addition, there are some new staff members: Lucy Tucker, from the Defense Language Institute, will teach Spanish and French; Jim Hiserman, formerly from Palma and the Monterey district, will teach business; Marikay Morris has transferred from the middle school to teach English; Sharon Bays, a part-timer last year, will teach full-time social studies; and Lynn Hayes-Archer will remain in the English Department part-time and also do some counseling.

Some familiar faces have departed: Bill Stone and Peter Schmuck retired and Christine Helgason resigned.

Residents use lion's share of city's water allocation

IF CARMEL residents would install simple conservation devices, the city could save enough water to service about 500 new homes or 176 ice cream parlors.

Planner Brian Roseth, as part of an ongoing city public relations campaign to make citizens aware of water conservation, has revealed figures that indicate residents continue to gobble increasing amounts of water.

While most of the city's attention has focused on mandatory measures to force water conservation on the commercial district, the real culprits in waste have been residents.

The residential zone consumed 540.3 ac. ft. of water in 1984-85, a nearly 33 ac. ft. increase from the 507.7 used in 1983-84, Roseth told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

'If Carmel residents installed water-saving toilets, aerators for the faucets, hot water pipe insulation and new shower heads, the city would save enough water to open 176 ice cream parlors.'

In comparison, water use in the commercial district dipped. The commercial district used 380 ac. ft. in 1984-85 compared to 424 ac. ft. in 1983-84 — a dramatic drop of 44 ac. ft. in one year.

Most of that drop can be attributed to a new city ordinance that prohibits new businesses if that use consumes more water than the previous business.

That ordinance was a key tool in city denial of the proposed Carmel Creamery Ice Cream Parlor on Ocean Avenue.

But if residents installed water-saving toilets, aerators for the faucets, hot water pipe insulation and new shower heads, the city would save enough water to open 176 ice cream parlors.

Roseth explained that 44 percent of the water residents use is for the exterior of their dwelling, most of which is to irrigate landscaping.

The other 56 percent is consumed inside, of which 8 percent is simple leakage. Residents can obtain a free retrofit kit from city hall that includes a leak-detecting device — a tablet, Roseth said.

The dye tablet is dropped in the toilet bowl and if the water turns clear it means there is a leak somewhere in the system.

The average resident can save water through installation of aerator devices on the faucets ($1.50 each), new shower heads ($15 each) and a low-flush toilet ($60-$100).

Coupled with insulating the hot water pipes, the average resident could save 30 to 40 percent of their interior water use.

If such measures were enacted by every resident, the city could save 143 ac. ft. of water per year, Roseth said.

Roseth added that if the 900 motel rooms in the city were retrofitted with new shower heads and low-water-use toilets another 36 ac. ft. of water could be saved. By employing the same changes, the commercial district could save the city about 36 ac. ft.

The city is in a water-use bind because it consumed 97.8 percent of its available 1,030.8 ac. ft. water allocation in 1984-85.

If the city reaches 100 percent of its allocation then the Monterey Peninsula Water District has the authority to impose mandatory conservation measures.

For a free retrofit kit or more information on water conservation tips, contact the city planning department at 624-6835.

CARMEL IS not only up the creek without a paddle, but also doesn't have any water to swim in. As the city's continual water problems mount, the next thing you know the Pacific Ocean will begin disappearing...Oh, no! Judging from this photo it already has! (Michael Gardner photo.)

Grosvenor's Inn expansion plans to be reviewed by county planners

THE MONTEREY County Planning Commission will continue its review of two controversial applications when it meets Wednesday, Sept. 11 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

At 2 p.m. commissioners will review a proposal to amend the Carmel Area Land Use Plan that would grant permissive zoning to expand Grosvenor's Inn on Junipero Avenue from 11 to 16 rooms.

At 3 p.m. commissioners will review a plan by Pebble Beach Co. to use a conveyor belt system to haul sand from Sawmill Gulch to its Spanish Bay construction site in Del Monte Forest.

Both issues were scheduled to be reviewed by commissioners Aug. 28, but were continued at the request of the applicants.

In addition, the Pebble Beach Co. conveyor belt was scheduled for a 7 p.m. hearing and the commission had only four members present after 5 p.m. and was forced to adjourn because it needs five members for a quorum.

Company officials say the conveyor belt will generate less noise and other environmental problems than its original plan, which was to haul the sand via trucks.

There have been protests from some local residents and the city of Carmel about the possible environmental and safety problems associated with the conveyor belt.

The LUP amendment for the expansion of Grosvenor's Inn is protested by the city of Carmel. Mayor Charlotte Townsend wrote that the county turned down an earlier proposed amendment to allow bed and breakfast motels in the unincorporated Carmel area.

"For the reasons the county planning commission previously denied bed and breakfast (motels) in the Carmel area, including traffic, parking, noise, light and glare, and intensity of use, the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea recommends that this proposed amendment not be adopted," the mayor wrote.

The mayor pointed out that Grosvenor's Inn is located within the city's sphere of influence and eventually may be annexed. Expansion would be a violation of city policies, Mayor Townsend believes.

"Expansion of existing commercial visitor-serving accommodations is inconsistent with the city's general plan and zoning regulations," she wrote.

"Since 1967 no additional visitor accommodations have been permitted in the residential neighborhoods of Carmel.

Fees waived for wildfire victims

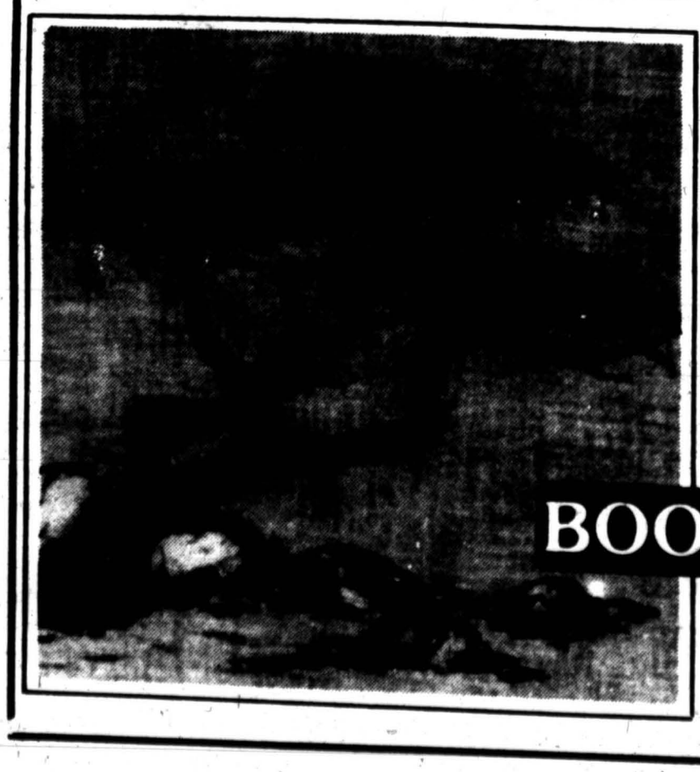

UNDER AN ordinance adopted Tuesday by the county Board of Supervisors, property owners whose homes were destroyed by recent wildfires in southern Monterey County and the Big Sur Coast will not be required to pay the usual county fees to rebuild their homes.

"Such fees may impose additional hardships upon the already-stricken property owners," said Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, whose 5th District includes much of the area devastated by the wildfires. "We want to simplify and speed up the process for rebuilding so that further damage and delay will not result from impending winter rains."

The ordinance waives building permit fees, health department inspection fees, inclusionary housing fees, initial study fees, and planning department fees.

The ordinance also allows county staff to issue certain discretionary permits without the delays caused by public hearings.

Colorful ceremony closes Serra bicentennial

——1,200 people gather at Carmel Mission to celebrate close of year-long observance——

More than 1,200 people gathered at Carmel Mission on a bright, sunny day to celebrate the close of the year-long bicentennial observance of Father Junipero Serra's death and the issuance of a 44-cent stamp in Serra's honor.

Cardinal Timothy Manning of Los Angeles headed a group of 28 Roman Catholic bishops in celebrating Mass to close the Serra Bicentennial Year, a year in which Serra attained "venerable" status, conferred by Pope John Paul II. Reaching venerable status is the first step in the Catholic Church towards sainthood.

The celebration began with a trumpet fanfare and the singing of a 100-voice choir as the bishops walked in procession to the altar.

In his homily Manning asked the people to offer "incessant prayer" to help in Serra's beatification, something the cardinal said would come "in God's good time." He also cited the dedication and sacrifice of the man known as the father of the California Missions. Under Serra's guidance nine missions, including Carmel Mission, were founded, forming a base for the successful settlement of California. Serra is interred at Carmel Mission.

The mass was briefly interrupted by an unscheduled speech by Chequeesh Auh-Ho-Oh, a Chumash Indian from Corralitos. She urged the assembled not to forget her ancestors who worked to build the missions and lived, died and are buried around the missions. Her appearance was brief and without incident.

The ceremony also marked the dedication of a new 44-cent International Air Mail stamp honoring Serra that was released in San Diego last week. Manning and Bishop Thaddeus Shubsda of Monterey were presented commemorative albums featuring the stamps. Also present at the ceremonies were Carmel Postmaster Jack Holt and James Aanenson, San Jose postmaster.

Drama and emotion marked Serra exhumation

The Exhumation of Father Junipero Serra
By Joe A. Hinojos

It was about 9:30 in the morning of Sept. 1, 1943, that I arrived at the mission in Carmel. Although I had been told that the service I would perform was of a confidential nature I felt apprehensive of what would transpire in the next few days. Little did I dream that it would be such a dramatic and traumatic experience.

I was in the Army at the time, stationed at Fort Ord. I was attached to the Public Relations Office, as a photographer for the "Panorama" our camp newspaper. I had recently met Father Michael O'Connell, pastor of the mission, and all he knew about me was that I was a photographer at Fort Ord. As I stood before the huge door waiting to be admitted into the mission, I had to smile, recalling the phone conversation between Col. Wesley Gritton, my p.r. officer and Father O'Connell.

O'Connell greeted me with, "Your colonel was most gracious in granting our wish that you do this work for us." As I stepped inside, the door was securely locked from the inside. I was later to understand the surreptitious nature of this assignment.

At the foot of the altar were three open graves. A slight musty odor exuded from them. The middle one was the final resting place of Father Junipero Serra, the founder of the California Missions; the other two were those of Father Juan Crespi and Father Julian Lopez.

I was a bit stunned. I now understood the reason for secrecy. This was an exhumation party, and I was a member of it. Had it been publicized in advance, the curious public would have been swarming all over the place. The news media could have embellished and made a big show of this sacred occasion.

"This had to be avoided," said Geiger, whom I met with his associate, Father Eric O'Brien; Dr. Theodore McCown, anthropologist from the University of California; Mark R. Harrington, curator of the Southwest Museum in Los Angeles; Major Richard Berg, Chief of Surgical Service, Fort Ord, with whom I had previously worked; C.D. Nagelmann, M.D. and Harry Downie, a dedicated curator, who intended to do only a few days' work, and remained 33 years to restore Serra's final resting place to its primitive beauty.

There was an aura of expectation. Everyone was speaking in hushed tones. I can only speak for myself, but in the semi-dark, humid atmosphere, I could feel a quiet excitement among the group. What would be found? What would be the condition of the remains?

Harry, already down in the grave, was kneeling on a platform he had constructed, about four feet down, just inches above where he figured the remains lay. He was insuring that there would be no pressure that might break the brittle skeletal remains. From here on he used only a garden trowel and paint brush to slowly and carefully probe and brush aside the dirt.

I was at the side of the grave. Harry's head and face were bathed in perspiration, as he handed me his first find. He was visibly nervous, his hand was trembling as I took the cross, the only article of minimal intrinsic value that was constantly worn by California's Gray Ox, as Serra was called. It was approximately five inches in length and vaguely resembled a Maltese Cross with a double cross bar. Using a sharp pencil, I carefully picked away the encrusted dirt, revealing what appeared to be imbedded gems, or possibly just plain red glass or was it green? I should remember. It was only 42 years ago.

Meanwhile, Harry quietly and diligently went about his task of unearthing the skull which was imbedded in what was presumably quick-lime. As I stood there, watching the proceedings, in a semi-mesmerized state, my mind flashed back to my childhood.

The year was 1927. I was again completely absorbed in John Steven McGroarty's stirring presentation of "The Mission Play" on the stage of the San Gabriel Mission Playhouse. It was the last act. Dusk was descending upon the final scene. The Indians, quietly weeping, were gathered around their beloved priest. The background lighting was superb, and as the evening sky slowly darkened, the saintly man haltingly uttered his last farewell, lay back his head, closed his eyes and quietly joined his heavenly father. Only a small, soft spotlight lit his face, and then that too faded into darkness. This was the end.

There was no immediate applause. For a few moments, the audience just sat there, seemingly transfixed. It was just an act, but a 12-year-old is usually very impressionable, and no doubt, the realism of this depiction had remained in the recesses of my subconscious. Now, 16 years later, here I was, re-living that part of my life.

By the next day, the remains had been taken into the Mortuary Chapel, spread out on tables and numbered. Written reports were compiled and submitted by the aforementioned group of doctors. I photographed all the various steps of the investigation, and made up several sets for the archives in Carmel, Santa Barbara, and the Vatican in Rome.

This is only conjecture on my part, but I have had this unwavering opinion (for 42 years) that there's the chance the man could have developed osteomyelitis, an infection of the marrow and bone structure, thus the so-called "Running Sore" that has been recorded in historical diaries. Just the few days that I spent with these Franciscan fathers and looking at the outside world gave me a different perspective of life. Their simple yet disciplined lifestyle made me aware of a higher spiritual plane.

For many years after I had taken part in the exhumation, I found it difficult to talk about it without feeling the emotional impact of this historical event.

Supervisors to vote on changes in county's housing ordinance

MONTEREY COUNTY supervisors hope to complete revamping of the inclusionary housing ordinance Tuesday, Sept. 10.

Supervisors will review the proposed new rules at 10:30 a.m. The meeting, which is open to the public, will be in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Supervisors already have reviewed the proposed changes and conducted public hearings.

One key provision in the amended ordinance would require low-cost housing to be built on a project site. An in-lieu fee to sidestep building affordable housing also may be eliminated.

The proposed changes in the law were prepared in response to the revelation earlier this year that not a single low- or moderate-cost housing unit was built in unincorporated Monterey County since the inclusionary housing ordinance was passed in 1981.

Ed Hogan of Carmel now has under development a nine-unit moderate-cost condominium project as part of a development near Los Laureles Grade. It is the first of its kind in unincorporated Monterey County.

The ordinance basically requires developers to set aside 15 percent of their new project for low- and moderate-cost housing.

However, two loopholes have been utilized by developers to sidestep building less expensive homes in exclusive neighborhoods.

One loophole allows developers to pay an in lieu fee rather than build the affordable units. The second loophole states that developers can build the low- and moderate-cost housing elsewhere.

The draft ordinance closes both loopholes for major developments. Small subdvisions of four units or less could pay an in lieu fee, however.

Don't forget about Youth Center either

THE CARMEL Youth Center has made some changes over the summer.

One remaining question is whether the Youth Center will be able to operate its fund raising Bingmobiles at the AT & T Open, the golf tournament that has replaced the Bing Crosby Pro-Am.

When Kathryn Crosby withdrew permission for the PGA to use her late husband's name for the tournament there was some concern whether the Youth Center could continue to operate the Bingmobiles.

The Youth Center uses the Bingmobiles to sell refreshments at the golf tournament. Center President Merv Sutton has been negotiating with the golf organizers on a compromise so the Bingmobiles can continue to be used for fund raising at the tournament.

In other news, Phil Cherry has resigned from his position as facilities director. His sister, Mary Jane Cherry, will assist Director Carole Colter.

Les Burns has been hired to repair and maintain the Bingmobiles. All of the Bingmobiles are undergoing facelifts and hot water will be installed in each to meet health code requirements.

There has been a lot of joint cooperation between the youth center and schools.

The youth council of the Youth Center and the Carmel High School student council met over the summer and decided that many dances now will be held at the center, southwest corner of Torres Street and Fourth Avenue, Carmel.

High school and middle school administrators also have pledged to help the youth center in joint projects with the schools.

The hours of the Youth Center have been extended. The center now is open from 2:30 to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 2:30 to midnight on Fridays, and noon to midnight on Saturdays. The center is closed on Sundays.

Middle school age students are allowed at the center until 8 o'clock nightly.

A hot dog happy hour including a soft drink for just 75 cents is offered daily from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

The Youth Center also will offer programmed activities, including weight training, first-run movies, chess, bowling and pool.

Some special activities will be a trip to Marine World, Boosters' silent auction, fund raising at the Laguna Seca races, holiday dances and a Halloween party.

For more information, contact the Youth Center at 624-3285.

Project 2000 reform report tops board agenda

HOW TO restart the sweeping reform report called Project 2000 that will guide educational policies into the next decade will be discussed by the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education Tuesday, Sept. 10.

Trustees are to meet at 7 p.m. in the Middle School library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

Project 2000 was developed by a team of volunteers over a week-long seminar in the summer of 1984, but it was shelved by the political turmoil of the past year.

During a brief information item at the Aug. 27 board meeting, Supt. Robert Infelise unveiled an eight-point proposal to restart the process.

Infelise at first proposed that trustees ask about four to six members of the original Project 2000 committee to reconvene and see if any changes should be made.

Infelise agreed with a board recommendation that all of the original 22-member committee be invited to look at the report again.

Under Infelise's proposal, the committee would also examine what reforms could be implemented now and develop a priority list for future projects.

Infelise is hopeful that some proposals can be implemented this school year.

Project 2000 is a 22-page policy document that begins with the mission of the district and continues on to analyze curriculum, teaching strategies, organization, staff roles and responsibilities, and how the school and the community can work together.

EMILY CAMPBELL of Carmel Valley enjoyed a day in the summer sun at the community center recently. Unknown to her, the Carmel Unified School District is pondering a sweeping reform measure that could affect her future education. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Project 2000 recommends that the district adopt an overall mission policy statement to guide all decisions. The proposed statement is:

"The mission of the Carmel Unified School District is to prepare all students to discover and expand their abilities to become responsible, thinking, contributing members of a global society.

"Students shall be empowered with the knowledge, skills and attitudes for three essential competencies: citizen competency, occupational competency (and) personal competency."

In the recommendations on "What shall we teach," Project 2000 states:

- "We must re-examine and re-structure curriculum content in light of the changing nature and role of information and knowledge.
- "Require a balanced core curriculum of basic subjects. Relate subjects to each other and to real-world issues.
- Offer additional subjects which are in accord with the district mission.
- Specific competencies must be addressed in every program.
- Establish a comprehensive system for curriculum development, renewal and articulation."

IN THE "instructional delivery" section, the report defines educational excellence as occuring when the "instructional system is able to provide the individual learner with an appropriate level of challenge and a realistic opportunity to succeed on a frequent and continual basis..."

Suggestions in the instructional delivery section include:

- "The instructional process must be tied more directly to student performance.
- "Alternative methods for demonstrating competence are needed and acceptable.
- "Instruction must be based on the most effective methods of teaching.
- "Available school time must be spent on quality instructional activities.
- "Learning environments need to incorporate cooperative learning.
- The instructional program needs to become more inter-disciplinary."

Organization of "time, space and people" is another important aspect to Project 2000.

In that section, the committee recommends:

- "The district committment to pre-kindergarten needs re-examination.
- "Grade levels and self-contained classes in elementary schools must be re-examined.
- "The departmentalized secondary school, grades six through 12, needs re-examined.
- "Alternative schools, school-within-a-school, and specialized schools can create positive climates, heighten motivation and combine general and specialized education.
- "The detailed program, rather than the schedule or calendar, must determine the use of time."

The committee also begins to discuss "staff roles and responsibility." Some of those recommendations include:

- "The highest quality teaching staff must be obtained and maintained.
- "Develop a five-year teacher hiring projection.
- "Assign teachers in areas of strength.
- "Improve the incentives and options for early retirement.
- "Insure thorough and accurate evaluations.
- "Develop and implement a comprehensive staff development program.
- "Provide a variety of methods for staff recognition.
- "Adequate financial compensation must be provided."

•

SUGGESTIONS FOR how the school district and community can work together include:

- "Develop cooperative arrangements with business and other public agencies.
- "Explore ways to involve students meaningfully in community activities and service.

Water management board to review water use, joint powers agreement with Carmel district

REVIEW of water allocations, consideration of a joint powers agreement with the Carmel Sanitary District and acceptance of an economic feasibility study on wastewater reclamation are on the agenda for the Monday, Sept. 9 meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Board.

The meeting will be held at Monterey City Council Chambers, Colton Hall, 7:30 p.m.

A public hearing will be held to determine whether total water allocation should be changed among each jurisdiction within the district based on requests from each jusrisdiction and the potential need to provide a larger drought reserve. Each September the board has to determine the allocations.

Each member's water use over the past year will be examined and compared to its allocation. If a member exceeds its allocation, the board will not allow new water meters to be installed for one year.

The board will also consider the possibility of a joint powers agreement with the Carmel Sanitary District to help fund its reclamation facility. The CSD plant could provide 2.4 million gallons per day of reclaimed water. The CSD is pursuing a $10 million loan from the state Water Reclamation Loan Program.

BUSINESS BEAT
BY NANCY HILLS

The Rocky Road is over

AS CONTROVERSIES go, the seriousness of ice cream cones is not right up there with Patrick Henry and the "give me death" crowd.

Of course, I guess the same could be said for tea, the Boston Harbor and all that other stuff.

There were no such radical demonstrations in Carmel Bay and on Aug. 28 attorney Jim Newhouse withdrew the business license applications for the alternative businesses of Beach Burgers in the current Orange Julius location and the Carmel Creamery at the Swensen's Ice Cream Parlor location.

The original request, turned down by the board of adjustments, had been for a new ice cream parlor in the former location of the Back Pocket on Red Eagle Lane.

Newhouse and his business partner Michael Montana had decided to put an ice cream parlor in the vacant Back Pocket location after people objected to them removing the only ice cream place in Carmel — Swensen's — to put in a new shoe store, J.J.'s. The city land use committee recommended that the application be approved sans the sale of ice cream cones. The ice cream cone restriction was an instant sensation in Carmel and brought nation-wide media interest in the doings of the Carmel city government.

The board of adjustments eventually turned down the application to save on water usage.

When the Carmel City Council upheld the board of adjustments decision Aug. 23 to deny a use permit for the Carmel Creamery on Red Eagle Lane, Newhouse and Montana had a possible alternative in mind.

Rather than put the shoe store they planned for current location of Orange Julius and Swensen's Ice Cream Parlor on the corner of Ocean Avenue and Mission Street, they considered changing Orange Julius to "Beach Burgers" and putting the Carmel Creamery in the Swensen's location.

It is possible to change from an active restaurant use to another without obtaining a use permit from the city. The new restaurant would remain a non-conforming use.

However, with an "It wasn't worth fighting anymore," Newhouse removed the business license requests for both Beach Burgers and the Carmel Creamery on Ocean Avenue.

Montana and Newhouse said they had not discussed the withdrawal of the applications with the leaseholder of the property, Dick Bruhn.

Bruhn had claimed earlier to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook he had known nothing about the applications to begin with and possibly would not rent the space if Montana and Newhouse wanted to continue the fast food operations there.

"In retrospect, I still feel that Carmel Creamery in the Back Pocket space was a good idea, something this community needed," Montana said. He added that he found the city council decision "disappointing."

Newhouse echoed his partner's feelings:

"I think the bottom line is it is the city's loss not to be able to buy an ice cream cone in town."

Montana said that the new shoe store, J.J.'s, is still on track and on time. They will start to remodel the Swensen's location when it closes officially on Sept. 7. The Orange Julius will close around Oct. 1, he said.

"Everyone will love J.J.'s. It will be a full-service shoe store done with antiques. We are planning to open in November," he said.

And so, as the sun sinks slowly into the west, this sticky business comes to a well-heeled end.

BEST FOOT FORWARD

Maybe you should read this column to your toes. This one is about shoes again.

Bobby Lee Frazier has declared his shoe store is made for moving, and will relocate Sunset Shoes from San Carlos Street near Seventh Avenue, where it has been for two and a half years, to a new location on Ocean Avenue.

St. Albans of London between Mission and San Carlos streets on Ocean Avenue is leaving Carmel and Sunset Shoes will take up residence in its vacated spot.

Frazier received unanimous use permit approval from the Carmel Board of Adjustments on Aug. 28 to change his store location. City staff findings described Sunset Shoes as a shoe store that "provides a line of affordable shoes for the mature woman and for customers requiring orthopedic footwear."

The permit was passed but only after a challenge by another Carmel businessman.

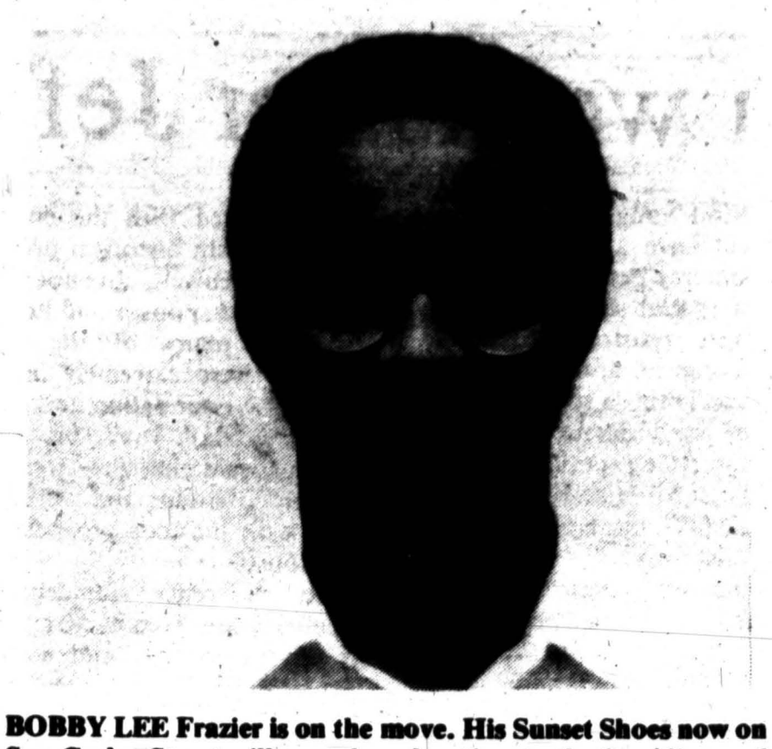

Gasper Cardinale, part-owner of Cardinale Fine Shoes and Carmel Plaza Men's Bootery in the Carmel Plaza and the Village Shoe Tree on Ocean Avenue, came to the board meeting to oppose the application. Cardinale is also the Carmel Business Association treasurer, though he was not representing the CBA at the meeting.

Cardinale told the board he was a "shoe merchant in Carmel" and that he wanted to bring to the attention of the board that there were already "50-odd shoe places in the city now."

Board member Arthur Mertens asked Cardinale if he was aware that Sunset Shoes was already in business here, while board member Gene Hammond asked if this meant that the board could refuse a relocation of Cardinale's business if they felt they had a reason. Cardinale answered in the affirmative to both questions.

Cardinale also claimed that there are 21 shoe places on Ocean Avenue. The staff findings had listed only five shoe stores. Cardinale listed the Village Shoe Tree, the Doud Arcade Footstop, Dick Bruhn's and Sprouse-Reitz as examples of places that sell shoes.

Dorrie Hammond, a Carmel resident and member of the business license and code review board (and wife of Gene Hammond) rose and told the board that "Bobby Lee Frazier does a good job" at his store.

BOBBY LEE Frazier is on the move. His Sunset Shoes now on San Carlos Street will soon be relocating to the St. Albans of London space on Ocean Avenue. (Mac McDonald photo.)

Though board members Marjorie Montelius and Thomas Nash expressed concern at the number of shoe stores already in the area, board member John Logan stopped all argument with his declaration that "this was a relocation of a business within the same zone and in the entire history of this board we have never, never denied such a move from within the same district." With a nod the board voted unanimously to approve the permit.

Frazier said the move will increase the space he has to work with from 500 sq. ft. to 1,260 sq. ft.

"I would like to carry a larger inventory with more colors and sizes. I want to give the locals a better variety because they are the people who should benefit from the increased space and new location. They are the ones that made me successful," he said.

Frazier said he used to help his father in a shoe repair business his father owned in Georgia.

"After tearing down and putting back together a lot of shoes I know a good one when I see it."

Frazier said he carries a lot of German walking shoes which he said "are the best in the world," the largest inventory of American shoes in Carmel (including Keds) and a good selection of Bernardos.

"I also carry a lot of good flat casual shoes for all of Carmel High School and Middle School. I have fashionable shoes with a good dollar value that hold up well," he said.

Frazier hopes to make the move next month but exactly when will have to wait until the return of Dan Silberberg, owner of St. Albans of London, from Europe.

"I look forward to doing a good honest business. I place a lot of emphasis on customer service and satisfaction and that will continue," Frazier said. "I enjoy all the people that come in the store and I would like to say 'thank you' to all the people who have supported the business. It will remain the same except I am moving from a small space to a large space."

GARDNER SHINES AGAIN

It's time for a "tip of the hat" for one of my fine and illustrious co-workers.

Michael Gardner, that well-known reporter who has been with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook for the past four years, has received a first place award from Sigma Delta Chi, a professional journalism organization, through the California State Fair.

Gardner was given a first-place award in the best newswriting category for his investigation into the Monterey County Inclusionary Housing Ordinance — an ordinance that was designed to provide more low- and moderate-cost housing in the county.

Gardner unveiled that not a single affordable home had been built in unincorporated Monterey County under the four-year-old ordinance because of loopholes in the law. Supervisors now have under consideration a series of amendments to close those loopholes.

Winning is nothing new for Gardner this year. He has won three major state-wide awards this year. In February, he received two second place awards from the California Newspaper Publishers Association for "spot news coverage" of the surprise collapse of the National Bank of Carmel and for news series coverage of the trend of affluent parents enrolling their childern in private schools because of problems in the Carmel Unified School District.

Good one, Michael, and congratulations from all of us here on the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook staff.

Exciting plans in works for Jeffers' centennial

A group of admirers of the late poet Robinson Jeffers gathered Sept. 2 at a reception at The Thunderbird Book Store in The Barnyard, for the announcement of a detailed program to celebrate in 1987 the 100th anniversary of the birth of Jeffers.

Advisory committee member Richard Tevis announced that as a prelude to the 1987 celebrations the foundation will host the First Annual Carmel Poetry Writers Conference in 1986. He told a group of more than 50 Jeffers fans that Robinson Jeffers will be used as a catalyst to help develop literary excellence, and that if the first conference is a success it will be moved to Asilomar Conference Center and become an annual event.

Fred Farr, a founder and former president of the foundation, gave a brief history of the Tor House Foundation and introduced President George White to the group.

White announced plans for the 100th anniversary and summed them up as being "exciting and innovative." He said that the foundation hoped to move into national recognition as a direct result of all the 1987 programs, and listed some of the events already planned.

He told the group that the 1987 Sierra Club calendar will use words of Jeffers; Occidental College will hold a combined anniversary of the college's and Jeffers' 100th birthday; American Poetry Magazine will print a special issue; Wind/Song (International Poetry Forum) will have a special performance in 1986; Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art will hold a special show in January 1987 of paintings, photographs, etc., denoting the environment and area; Book Club of California will print a special issue in 1987; University of San Francisco, Gleeson Library, will do "something special" in 1987, and the National Trust for Historic Preservation in Washington, D.C. has been requested to promote the anniversary.

White told the group that these were by no means the full range of activities planned for the centennial and that further announcements would be made as other commitments were confirmed.

Further information on this and any other Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation events are available through Nancy Miller at 624-1813.

TRUST MEMBERS VISIT TOR HOUSE

A group of National Trust members were taken on a private tour of Robinson Jeffers' home, Tor House and Hawk Tower, by trustees and docents of the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation last week in Carmel.

The group was attending a three-day workshop on historic site management offered by the trust, the American Association for State and Local History and the American Association of Museums. The attendees were all from the western states and were affiliated with the National Trust or connected with historical properties.

Donna Penwell, director of Colton Hall Museum and sponsor and host of the group, said that many of the National Trust members were extremely impressed by the Tor House Foundation and its organization. David Casebolt and his wife, both of Oakland, said that they were involved with the Pardee House and were renovating the house with the idea of operating it like the Tor House.

The conference attendees sampled fruit and cheese prepared by Mrs. Donald Borden, Tor House trustee, and wine provided by Durney Vineyards.

7th ANNUAL JEFFERS TOR HOUSE FESTIVAL

The 7th Annual Robinson Jeffers Tor House Festival will be held Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 5 and 6 at the Hacienda Carmel. All seminars, the reception, and dinner with speaker, will be held Saturday, Oct. 5. The poetry walk will be held Sunday, Oct. 6; from 9 a.m. to 12 noon with a "brown bag" picnic at Stewart's Beach at noon. Sunday also will be the informal touring of the Tor House, Hawk Tower and the gardens from 12 noon to 4 p.m.

The deadline for reserving tickets is Sept. 27. For further information call Nancy Miller at 624-1813.

Peninsula man gets his licks in on Carmel's 'Cone Controversy'

THE SO-CALLED ice cream controversy may be slowly melting away as an issue, but peninsula cartoonist Jay Campbell wants to keep getting in his licks.

Campbell saw his opportunity after reading and watching news accounts of the city's ice cream fiasco.

"Carmel is a caricaturists delight," he said while sporting a bright yellow t-shirt featuring a smiling chocolate ice cream cone and the words, "Ban Carmel, Ca." on it. "I saw all the little t-shirt and gift shops and said 'Let's have a little fun with Carmel.' "

Campbell plans on not only distributing his satirical shirts, but sponsoring what he calls a "Drip-In" at Devendorf Park, Saturday, Sept. 21 at "high noon." He also claims to have a friend, Bill Border, in Boulder, Colo., who will organize a similar "Sympathy Drip-In" there. City officials should be glad he's not implementing his original plan.

"I was going to start a picket and drip ice cream — especially chocolate chip — all the way down Ocean Avenue," said Campbell with tongue ostensibly in cheek.

Campbell got a few chuckles and quizzical looks the past week walking around Carmel with his t-shirt. Ironically when he went to get an ice cream cone for a photograph, Swenson's, the only game in town for now, was closed. He had to go to the Crossroads to get ice cream.

JAY CAMPBELL takes his tongue out of cheek long enough to eat an ice cream cone while modeling a new t-shirt expressing his feelings about the Carmel 'Cone Coutroversy.' (Mac McDonald photo.)

As if Carmel needed any more stirring up.

County officials issue warnings about rabies

The Monterey County Health Department has issued a reminder that the county remains a rabies-endemic area after a visitor was bitten by rabid fox last month.

Dr. Robert Melton, county health director, said that wild animal species including skunks, foxes, coyotes and bats may have rabies in any part of the county, at any time of the year.

The rabies virus is spread bewteen these wild species and humans may be exposed if they come into contact with them.

In order to prevent rabies in humans the health department recommends that people:

--avoid wild animals at all times, especially those that show lack of fear of humans.

--avoid contact with wild or domestic animals that show signs of disorientation or peculiar behavior.

--report such animals to the Monterey County SPCA immediately.

--keep pets vaccinated against rabies and keep them close to home.

The department also suggest anybody bitten by an animal - wild or domestic - seek medical assistance immediately and report the bite to the SPCA at 373-2631 or 422-4721.

This year 140 animals from Monterey County have been tested at the health department laboratory, with four bats and one fox tested positive for rabies. Over the past 10 years the lab has found a total of nine skunks and one dog positive for rabies. About 100 animals are tested each year, but there have been no cases of human rabies during the last decade.

The first prize of the raffle at Fun in the Sun will be a five-minute grocery run at Monte Mart on Carmel Rancho Blvd. The winner will have five minutes to grab as many items as possible from the shelves of the Monte Mart store. Alcoholic beverages and cigarettes are excluded from the run.

There are other prizes including a $100 gift certificate from Macy's and an overnight stay at the Meadow Wood resort in Napa.

Raffle tickets are $1 each and can be purchased at all Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce member businesses or at Fun in the Sun.

• The Carmel Business Association's Annual Barbecue will be held at the Mission Ranch September 14. No-host cocktails at 6:30 p.m., dinner, then dancing to Dave Clay's orchestra.

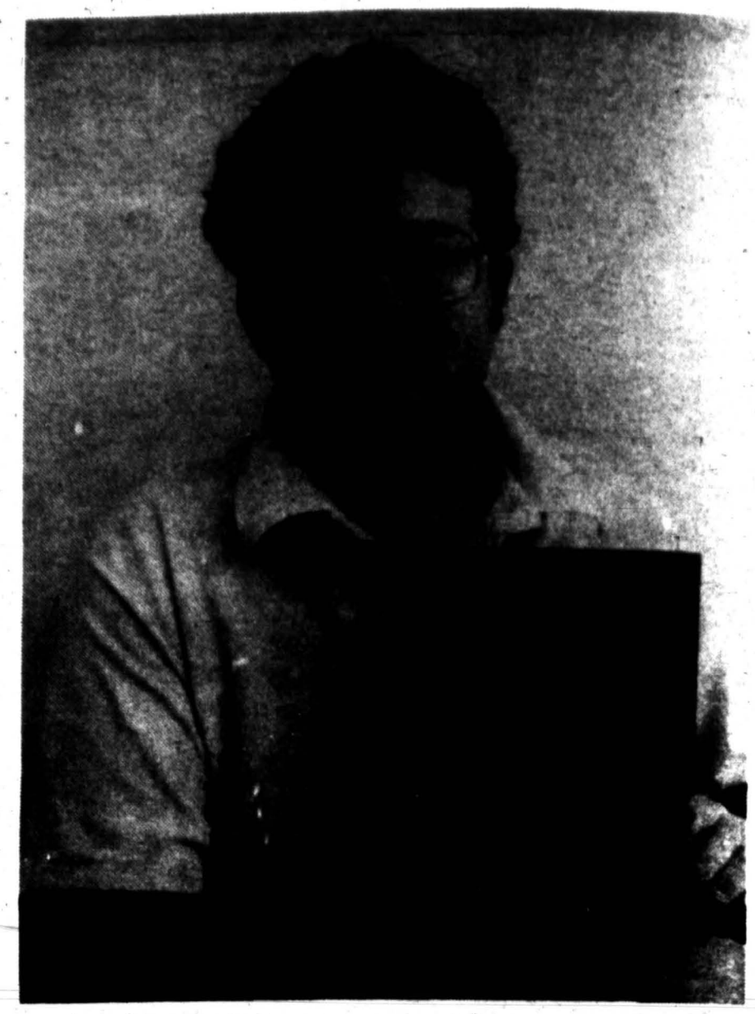

The drawing will be held for the Volkswagen Cabriolet and the $1,000 shopping spree in Carmel.

As the Carmel Business Association does not get money from the city of Carmel, the lottery is an important source of revenue. The CBA reports that it bought "much-needed office equipment" with the raffle profits from last year.

The barbecue will be $20 per person. Reservations may be made by sending a check to P.O. Box 4444.

• The Professional Women's Network Membership Showcase Brown Bag Luncheon at noon Sept. 10 in The Crossroads Community Room will feature Kay Dyer of Happy to be Me.

Dyer uses techniques including laughter as a medium to stay healthy and happy with oneself.

MICHAEL GARDNER, reporter extraordinaire for the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook, holds a first place California State Fair media award. SAY "STUCCO" AND HOLD THAT POSE

I meet a man who wants to show me pictures of his building, I leave. I mean really, what dooo you say in such a situation! ("Oh, aren't those just the cutest corners!" or better yet "My, it looks just like you!")

To specialize in taking photographs of exteriors and interiors of buildings may sound strange to some people, but think of the number of times those pictures are used in publications. And someone needs to take those pictures.

Photographer Joan Brophy said she is one photographer who finds that field particularly interesting.

After three years as a professional photographer, Brophy said she has decided to specialize in architectural photography.

"I believe that I am the only one in the area to specialize in architecture and interiors," Brophy said.

Brophy said that her profits for the past two years have all gone into the purchase of equipment.

"I have the top-of-the-line equipment to create a lighting effect. I have the umbrellas and gels to create different colors of light. For cameras I have a Hasselblad and a four-by-five Sinar view camera.

Brophy almost never uses a 35mm camera because of "the degree of the enlargements. For sharpness and clarity I need a medium format such as the Hasselblad.

"I don't go in and do a quickie shot. In an extremely large room sometimes it takes me two hours to just get set up. For an exterior, sometimes I have to wait and see when the light is the best and even go back to do the shoot."

Creating atmosphere remains one of the most important aspects of her photography, Brophy said.

"A lot of times, film cannot record the mood as it is set," she said. "Whatever the person wants, I use my lighting to create a mood."

Brophy has studied with photographer Morley Baer and has been hired by Sunset Magazine to do freelance photography on the peninsula.

CELEBRATION CENTER AT THE CROSSROADS

Creative Spirit is the name of a contemporary greeting card, party supplies and paper goods shop she hopes to open by the end of September in The Crossroads.

"I plan to have 2,000 cards, gift wrap paper, confetti, party goods, balloons, everything," she said. "My main goal is to provide not only in-house party planning but also provide assistance in picking out gifts and cards for people hard to buy for. We will have custom-made cards and seminars in making a lot of different types of gift boxes, containers, baskets and stickers.

"I love special needs. People who cannot think of something to do for a party — those are the ones I like to help."

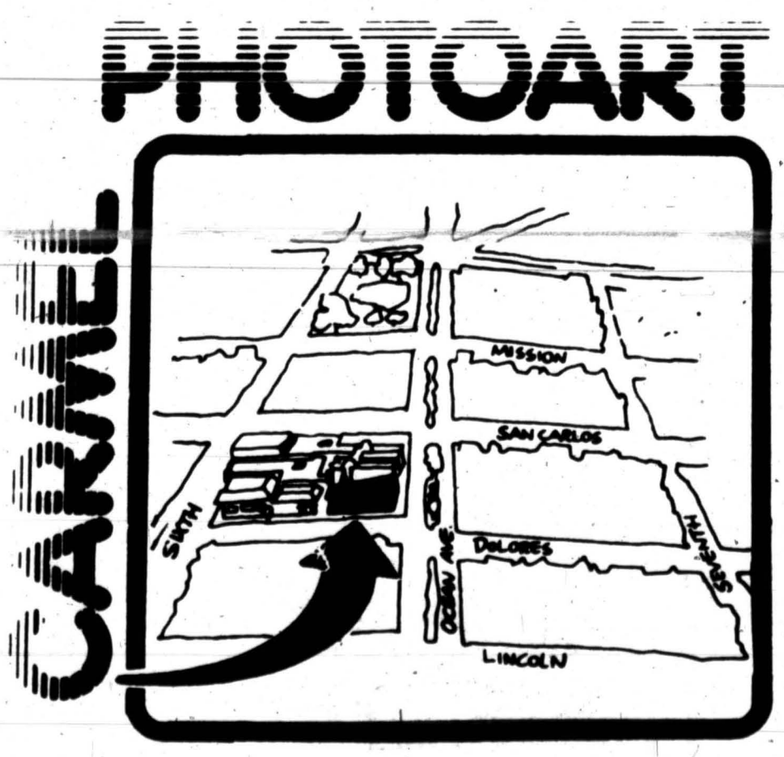

Netzy also plans to have a special section just for children.

"I will have the cards low to the ground so they can pick out their own card for Grandma or Grandpa or whoever they need to. I want to do that so they are not forgotten," Netzy said.

Breaking bread with Brown

By SARAH BOUHABEN

WHY NOT "Break Break with Ed Brown"? That is exactly what more than 30 Peninsula residents elected to do Saturday afternoon, Aug. 31 at the Thunderbird Bookstore at The Barnyard. It was Ed Brown's booksigning event for the publication of his newest cookbook, Tassajara Recipes.

"There's a lot more to this cookbook than meets the eye," said one devoted reader, "wonderful photography, poetry as well as recipes!"

Country French bread, potato bread, challah bread, onion dill spread — these are among the recipes, the delicious samples, that guests delighted in Saturday. Brown, with beautiful, expressive handwriting wrote personal inscriptions in each guest's copy. Some "alumni bread bakers" presented their tattered, well-used copies of Brown's previous cookbook, The Tassajara Breadbook for an autograph!

"I bought your Tassajara Bread Book in 1972... . Your book was very well written," share one such alumni bread baker. "I read the book cover to cover. My first try at bread baking was laborious. But your book answered all my stupid questions about how to bake bread. Now I bake bread all the time!"

Tassajara Recipes, Brown's third cookbook following The Tassajara Bread Book and Tassajara Cooking, is a new collection of recipes from the Zen Mountain Center at Tassajara. Tassajara is a Zen Buddhist meditation center, a retreat, open to visitors in the summer months and is located along a 14-mile dirt road in the eastern hills of Carmel Valley. Brown has been associated with Tassajara since 1966. He was the head cook for three years and has also worked in the Zen Center Green's Restaurant in San Francisco.

"I first became interested in cooking," begins Brown with a grin, "in the eighth grade. This little girl brought a salad for show and tell, a basil salad. I had never liked salad until that day!" Or, as Brown writes in his Autobiographical Tidbits:

"I have been fascinated by writing about food ever since I started reading M.F.K. Fisher when I was 10 or 11. The Gastronomical Me, How to Cook a Wolf, the titles alone had always attracted me, though I had no idea what "gastronomical" was or even how to pronounce it. (And I could not understand why anyone would write a whole book about cooking wolves when their meat was not available in the supermarket.) I read about a world in which food and cooking were integral to the fabric of daily life, not something to take time out for, to get out of the way, or just to fuel up on. Food was life. Life was food."

Among the Peninsula residents gathering Saturday were Alina Wagner of Carmel, Tracy Reid of Carmel Valley, Lettie Bennett of Carmel, Fran Thompson of Pacific Grove, Betsy Carlson of Monterey, Ruth and Steve Kahn of Carmel, Anna Beck of Carmel, previous owner of Tassajara, Darby Worth of Carmel Valley and Scott Hennessey of Carmel.

Older Americans make the best credit risks, the National Consumer Finance Association says. One reason is that seniors have the most conscientious payment record of any age group. A study conducted by the National Foundation for Credit Research found that the delinquency rate on debts among people aged 55 and older was less than one-half of one percent. Another factor in older citizens' high credit rating is that 85 percent of them own their homes, the best collateral available for loans.

You might not think of paper bags as "health hazards," but Dr. Meyer Waide of Graduate Hospital in Philadelphia will tell you otherwise. He warns against the "loaded paper bag syndrome" affecting older shoppers, especially those with a history of heart, low-back or hernia problems. Heavy grocery bags can be genuine health hazards to such people, he says. Ask checkout clerks to put only one heavy item in each bag and, if possible to use smaller bags when the pack your groceries.

CITIZENS HAVE a much more convenient place to find out about their city government these days. The city has installed two new bulletin boards in the Carmel Post Office that display agendas, public hearings, job openings and other information. Youth orchestra auditions to be led by new director

THE YOUTH Orchestra of Monterey County has named Vince Gomez of Los Altos as its music director and conductor.

Gomez, 50, succeeds Stewart Robertson, who resigned earlier in the summer after being named assistant conductor of the Oakland Symphony Orchestra and music director of the Oakland Symphony Youth Orchestra.

"We are sorry to see Mr. Robertson go," said Youth Orchestra President Scott MacClelland, "but we are very excited that Mr. Gomez, with his experience in building the Santa Cruz Youth Symphony, will lead our orchestra. Both men are outstanding musicians, and we are very lucky that our high musical and educational standards will continue in such fine hands."

Gomez teaches and conducts music at Cabrillo College in Aptos. He has an extensive background in youth orchestra activities that includes eight years as conductor of the Santa Cruz Youth Symphony. He has conducted choirs and orchestras in the Philippines, Ecuador, Texas and California. He is currently the music director of the San Francisco Bay Area Chorale.

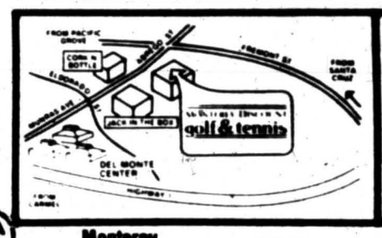

Gomez will conduct auditions for the Youth Orchestra of Monterey County on Friday through Sunday, Sept. 6, 7 and 8. Rehearsals begin Wednesday, Sept. 11. Auditions are open to any instrumental student in Monterey County between the ages of 10 and 20. Seating is competitive. Rehearsals will be held on Wednesday afternoons at Monterey Peninsula College. Further information can be obtained by writing to the Youth Orchestra of Monterey County at P.O. Box 3322, Monterey, 93942, or by calling 624-2040 or 372-3768.

Freschi's condos win tentative city support

THE CARMEL Planning Commission has granted tentative approval to James Freschi of Pebble Beach for his proposed six-unit condominium project on the west side of Junipero Avenue between Fifth and Sixth avenues.

Commissioners, who earlier this year had rejected a proposal by Freschi for a larger housing and commercial project at the same location, unanimously granted the tentative tract map at their Aug. 28 session.

The commission also ruled that Freschi does not have to prepare an environmental impact report (EIR).

Freschi tentatively is scheduled to bring his design plans to the commission Sept. 18 and if the concept is okayed he would return in October for possible final design approval.

Freschi proposes to build six condominiums and relocate the former San Francisco Federal Savings and Loan building to the rear of the property. An underground parking garage with 24 spaces also will be constructed.

The existing commercial spaces — the coin shop and restaurant — will remain. The old bank building also will be used as commercial space, under his proposal.

Together.

Suttle accepts a conducting challenge

By ANNE PAPINEAU

CLARK SUTTLE is a man of many musical likes and few avowed prejudices.

"I like Haydn. I love Beethoven. Shostakovich has proven to be a fascination. His music is a two-edged sword. It never is what it appears to be near the surface."

Suttle has appeared in solo recital at Carnegie Hall, performing on double bass. And he has also stepped in as bass player with jazz ensembles.

"I like jazz, some rock 'n' roll. I have no prejudice, but I have a very high standard as to what I consider art and what I consider formula."

ARTS & LEISURE

Suttle, 32, is the new music director and conductor of the Monterey County Symphony. He succeeds Maestro Haymo Taeuber, who retired this spring after serving as conductor of the 40-year-old organization for 16 years.

Taeuber's successor assumes the baton amidst substantial controversy. Eight candidates from a field of approximately 175 applicants actually guest-conducted the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra over the past two years. Its board of directors in April awarded the job to Suttle, but a majority of orchestra members supported Oleg Kovalenko of Carmel as their choice for conductor and music director.

To highlight their stand, musicians called a strike on April 26, which cancelled Taeuber's farewell concert. Aware of the discord, Suttle, who most recently served as associate conductor of the Phoenix Symphony Orchestra and music director and conductor of the Phoenix Ballet Company, relinquished his appointment. But the board stood by its decision, and Suttle was called back.

Suttle, new to this area but not to music, understands he is entering an orchestral battle zone.

"Do I see myself as the messiah?" Suttle quipped when asked if he viewed himself as a healing force on the local symphonic scene.

"My biggest challenge will be to finish musicians' auditions, which are scheduled from seven in the morning to 11 at night. My challenges are to just let the Monterey County Symphony expand and grow. I don't see the past problems as a step back for our orchestra. I know the Monterey County Symphony will continue its 40th season. We will be here for the people."

Suttle and the audition committee indeed have their work cut out for them, since a majority of the first-chair Monterey County Symphony musicians are now listed as members of the new Monterey Bay Symphony.

The 40th concert season for the Monterey County Symphony is scheduled to open Oct. 13 and continue through May 1986.

"I can confidently say we will have a complete ensemble," Suttle told The Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "We have a very heavy representation of local people (among auditioners.) Candidates have arrived from all over the peninsula, as well as Santa Cruz, San Jose, San Francisco and Oakland."

In the rarefied world of symphony conductors, Suttle's background is unusual in that he is exclusively American-trained. He grew up in Livonia, Mich., a suburb between Detroit and Ann Arbor. Suttle's father was a painter, and his mother, he explained, "had a very natural instinct for music. She loved the ballet and symphony concerts."

In the fourth grade Suttle studied the guitar, noting, "It wasn't very successful. My hand just wasn't the right shape for the guitar."

By grade seven he had taken up the double bass, and it is this instrument that has provided the focus of his musical studies and influences his concept of the orchestra.

"Because the double bass is a string instrument, it gives me a sympatico with a large part of the orchestra," Suttle observed. "That is a slight edge rather than being trained in a different area. Conductor Zubin Mehta played double bass. I hear the orchestra from the bottom up, which is the way I think you should because that's where the music starts."

Suttle received both his bachelor of music degree in double bass and master of music in conducting from the University of Michigan.

Music became his passport beyond the borders of that state. Suttle's experience includes serving as Exxon/Arts Endowment Conductor and associate conductor of the Buffalo Philharmonic; assistant conductor of the Richmond Symphony and Sinfonia; music director and conductor of the Ann Arbor Civic Theater; lecturer in music at the University of Michigan and assistant conductor of the Michigan Youth Symphony.

As a musician, Suttle received the bronze medal at the International Performance Competition in Geneva, Switzerland; third prize in the Baltimore Conducting Competition and first prize in the Zeronian String Competition.

"In Europe they have much more of a system for training new conductors — a ladder to climb — than exists in this country," he said. "Here it's much more difficult."

Suttle was a college-age musician when he first gained the notion of entering the conducting field.

"A person once described it as something you get bitten by. I was in college when the bug bit. I've been conducting ever since."

The then-novice conductor said he found his mentor in Max Rudolf, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony and an artistic overseer of the Exxon/Arts Endowment Conductor program.

"We entered that training program through audition. Each of us was invited to Rudolf's house to talk about music. The man was in his 80s. His 'aliveness,' his knowledge of repertoire and his love of not only music but humanity itself was awesome."

•

SUTTLE SAID he will strive to bring equal "aliveness" to the 40th season of the Monterey County Symphony.

"When I was here for my auditions I attended a chamber concert and I was pleased to see the auditorium filled. It's going to be a privilege to present pieces I have chosen to a discerning audience. I see a great deal of potential for all the arts in this area. There is so much happening just in terms of our symphony. I think we've a real surprise in store for the community, a very good surprise."

Flutist Julius Baker will be the guest soloist for the opening concert series, scheduled Oct. 13-15.

The program will include the overture to La Forza del Destino by Giuseppe Verdi, Concerto for Flute by Carl Nielsen and Symphony No. 9 in E Minor, Op. 95, New World, by Antonin Dvorak.

"I sought to create a balance the entire season in terms of concertos, symphonies, tone poems and overtures. We're very widespread with this repertoire."

The new music director advised audiences to "look at the six programs as a total package and you'll see a representation of many schools of thought, the French, German, contemporary and baroque."

Suttle's own musical tastes are admittedly broad but selective.

'A person once described it as something you get bitten by. I was in college when the bug bit. I've been conducting ever since.'

"I love modern music. I like to arrange current pop tunes. I've enjoyed studying baroque instruments and have played viola da gamba and recorder.

"I'd like to see some of the current artists expand their form. That would be interesting to me as a musician. If a work has control of all the technical aspects and we can go beyond those aspects to create something, whether in architecture, painting or music, it's an art," Suttle pointed out.

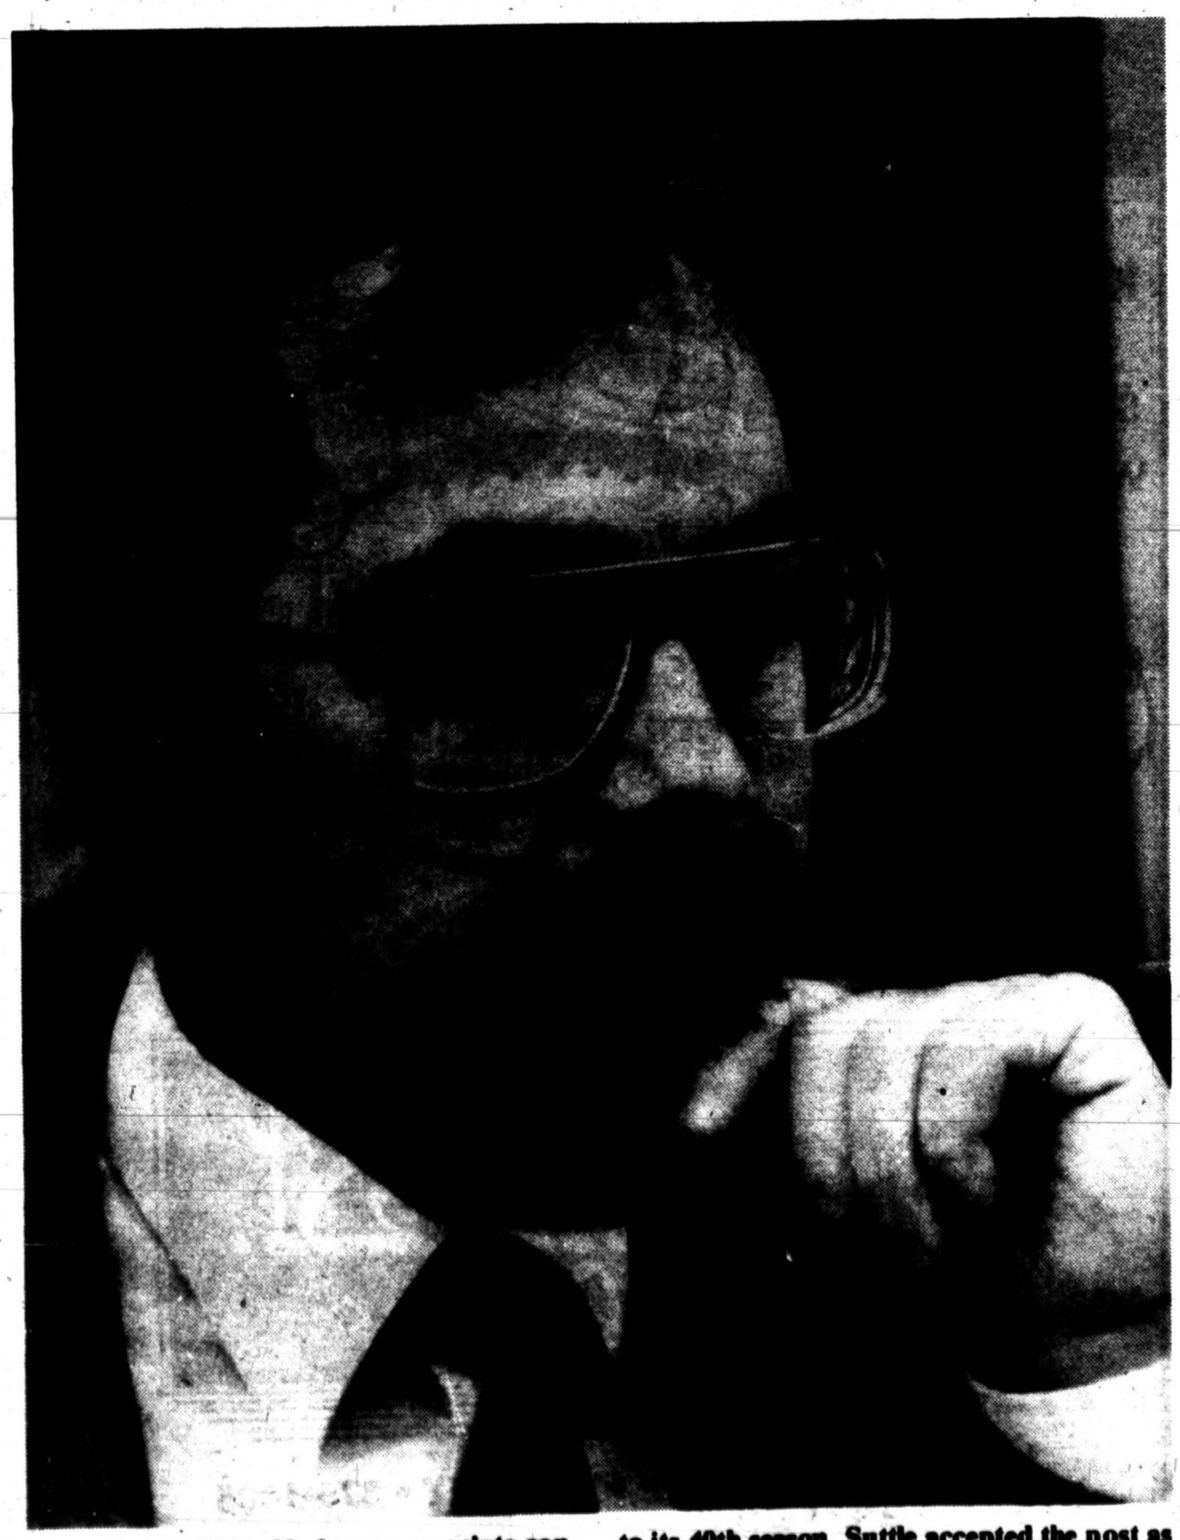

The new music director and conductor has not yet found a permanent peninsula home, and in the past few weeks has found himself commuting between commitments in Europe, Arizona and the Monterey Peninsula.

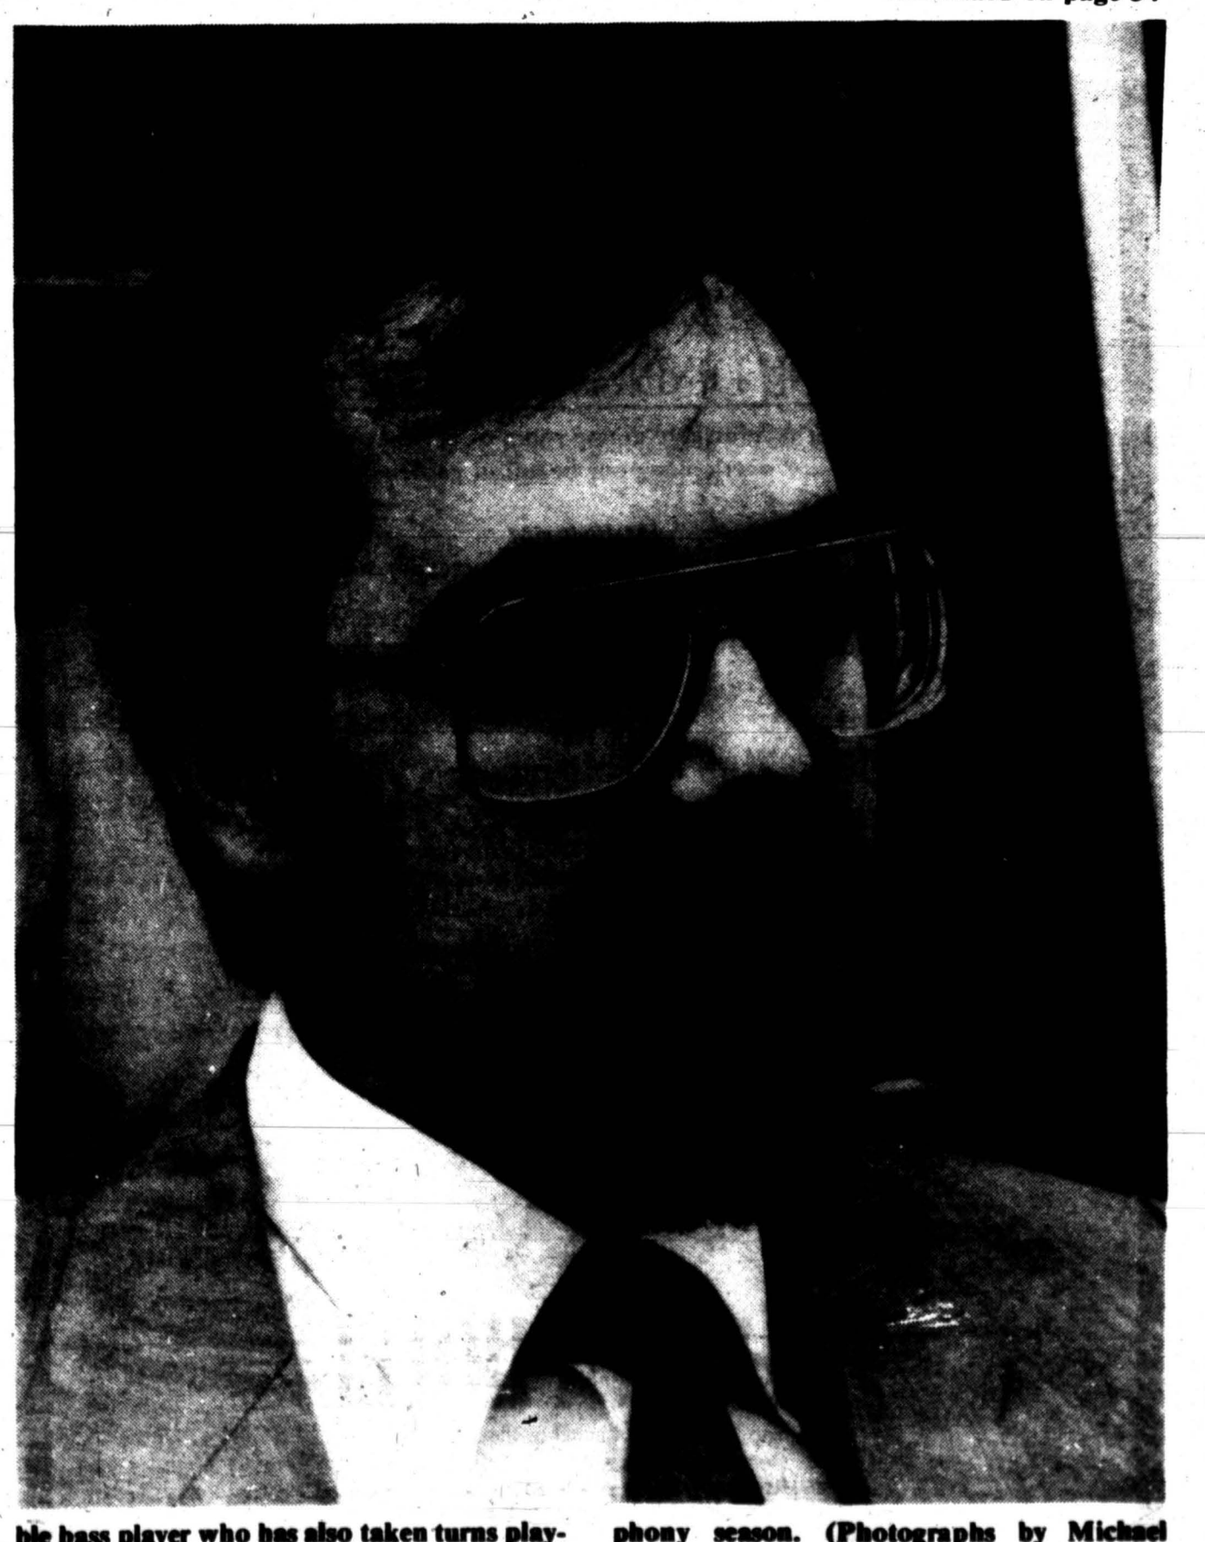

His fiancee is from Germany, and Suttle said, "We plan to marry soon."

He claims that he welcomes the challenge of guiding the Monterey County Symphony into its 40th season.

"I think any orchestra has problems,

CLARK SUTTLE, 32, former associate conductor of the Phoenix Symphony Orchestra, will lead the Monterey County Symphony into its 40th season. Suttle accepted the post as music director and conductor amidst a blaze of controversy. He is an award-winning double bass player who has also taken turns playing the jazz bass. AMATEUR COWBOYING will be on display this weekend during the annual Carmel Valley Ranchers' Days — a free event open to the public.

Defending champion and Castroville resident John Bill Rodriguez will join other cowboys and cowgirls in a variety of rodeo-style events at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club on East Garzas Road. The events begin at 8:30 a.m. Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 7-8.

Hungry cowpokes can start off each day right with a pancake breakfast beginning at 7 a.m. A steak or chicken barbecue will be dished out from noon until 8 p.m. Country and western music will be played until 10 p.m. Saturday night.

There will be a variety of events staged that depict the activities of the turn-of-the-century cowboy, including team roping, calf branding, barrel racing, stock horse and team penning.

Silver buckles will be given to all event winners and a horse trailer is awarded to the all-around champion.

This year organizers hope to raise funds from entries and food sales to donate funds to local groups, such as the Little League, fire department and community center.

AT THE CHERRY FOUNDATION

BY JANE WILGRESS

A rich weekend

WE HOPE that the many friends of Justin Stone will come and see the exhibit of his paintings here. The exhibit will open this Saturday, Sept. 7, with a reception for the artist in Cherry Hall from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. All are welcome to attend. This will be Justin's fourth one-man show, and the second to be held at the Cherry Foundation. The exhibit will run through Sept. 25.

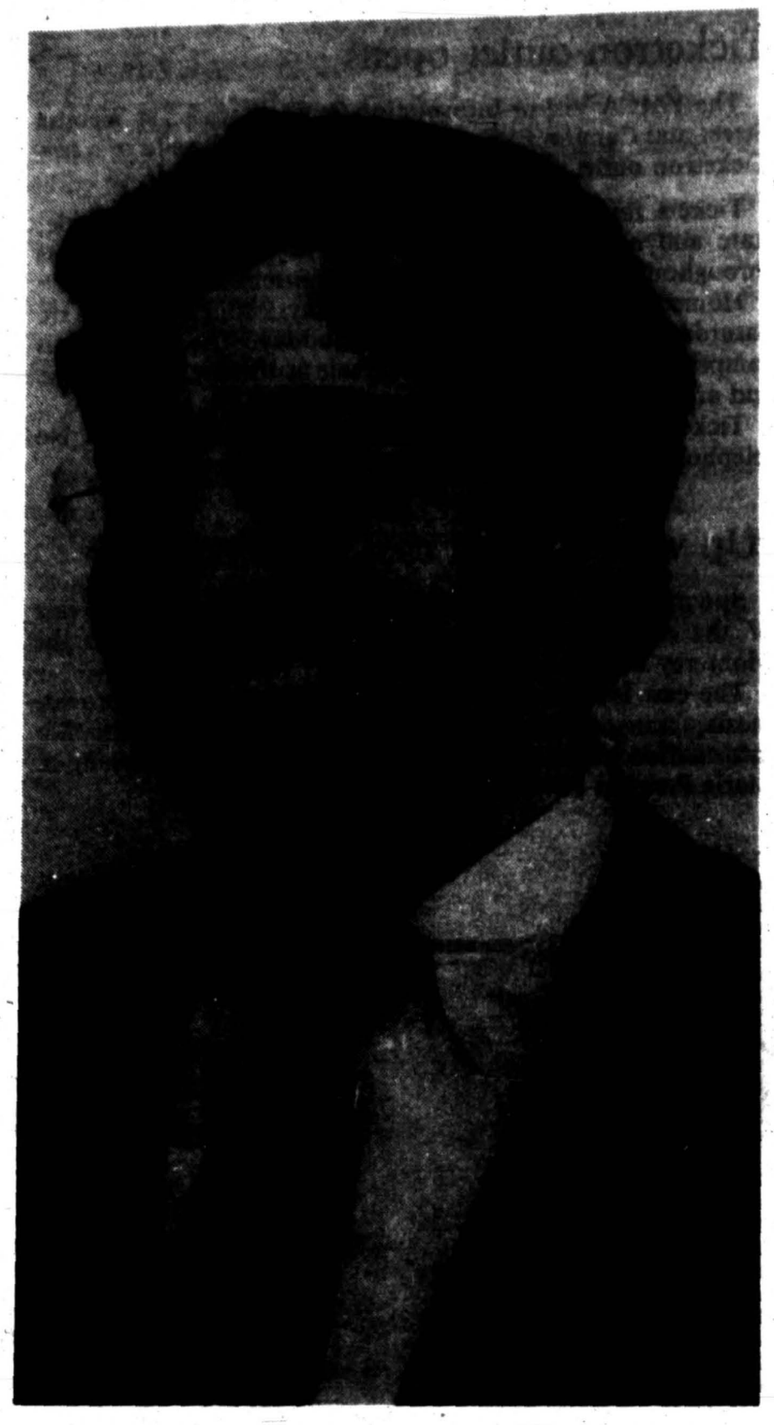

On Sunday, Sept. 8 we offer a double-header indeed. Jaya Karls, who has been teaching a yoga class here for the past few weeks, is offering a "Raja yoga workshop" starting at 7:30 a.m. in Cherry Hall. The early start, Jaya explains, is scheduled so that participants may still have their Sunday afternoon free. Fee for the workshop is $30. Jaya will teach movement and breathing, meditation and chanting. The fee includes a vegetarian brunch — which she will prepare herself. She asks that you bring your own mat or blanket. To register, call us at 624-7491, or Jaya at 624-2607.

And — Congressman Leon Panetta has done it again! That is, he has most kindly agreed to join musicians Misha Rosenker and Stephen Tosh and will play the piano in a Cherry Foundation benefit concert, as he did for us in April of 1984. This year the concert will be presented at 1 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 8 in the Music Hall at Monterey Peninsula College. (The early hour is due to Leon Panetta's complicated schedule.)

Those who have heard teen-age violinist Misha Rosenker and his superb accompanist Stephen Tosh will not want to miss this event; nor indeed should anyone miss it who has not yet heard them. Misha carries all before him, as Leon Panetta did at age 12 in a piano recital at Sunset auditorium in 1951, given under the auspices of the Cherry Foundation.

For last year's concert, our board president Marilyn Sanders titled the program "Young Performers a Generation Apart." We are grateful to both generations for once again making possible this marvelous musical offering. Donation, tax-deductible, will be $10. Please call us fast for reservations at 624-7491.

What a wonderful way to start the month of September!

FOR THE third time, Congressman Leon Panetta will play for the piano for the benefit of the Carl Cherry Foundation. The concert will be presented Sunday, Sept. 8 at the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall.

Open Heart Open golf tournament set Sept. 20

The American Heart Association will kick off its 1985-1986 fund campaign with the Open Heart Open golf tournament at noon Friday, Sept. 20. All golfers who want to support heart research and education are invited to play in the tournament at Corral de Tierra Country Club west of Salinas. Entry forms are available from the American Heart Association, 10 San Miguel Ave., Salinas. The Open Heart Open registration fee is $125, most of which is tax-deductible.

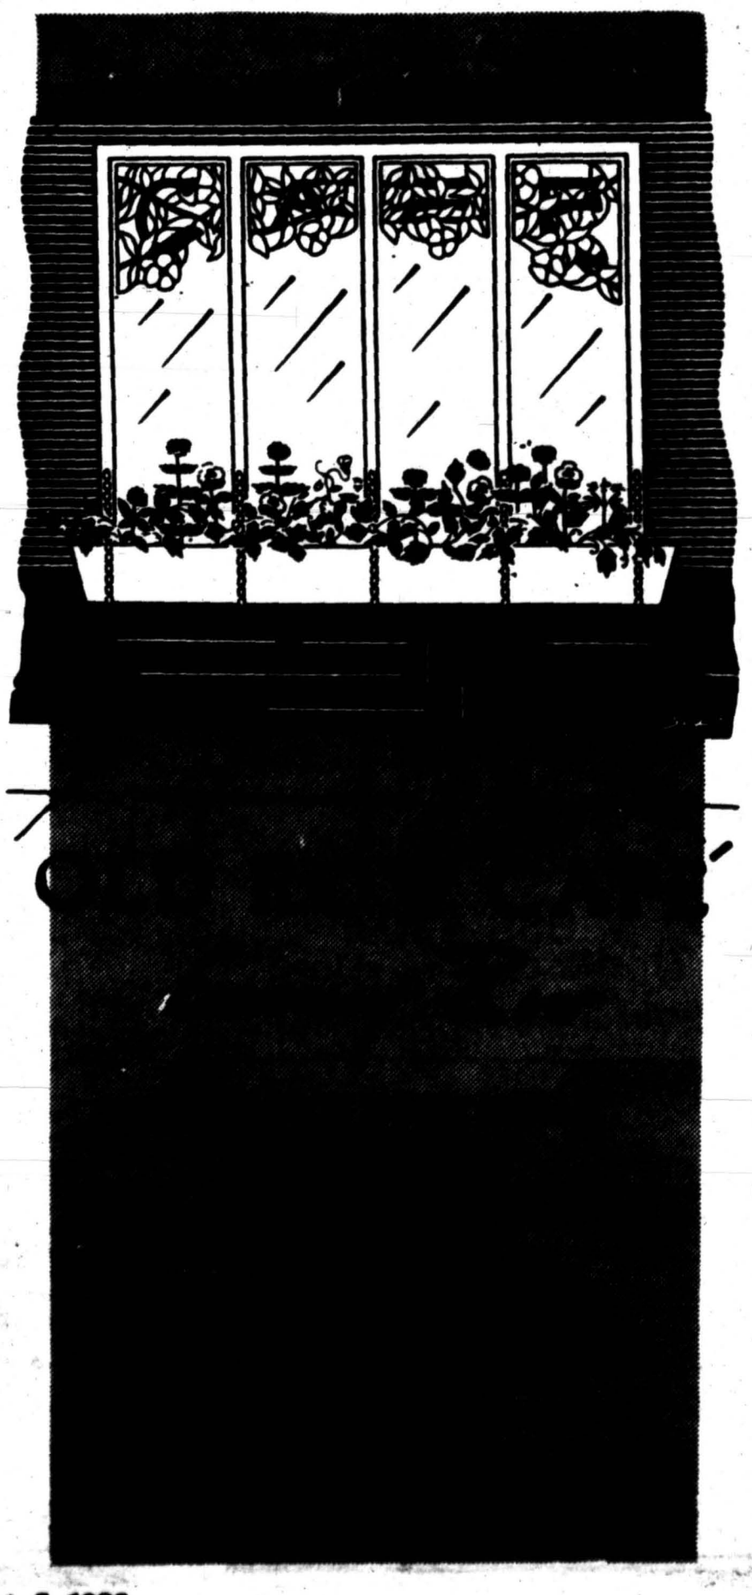

Taylor California Cellars has donated $2,000 to help underwrite tournament costs and will give each player a bottle of champagne.

The 1985 Open Heart Open is dedicated to George Brucato, felled by a heart attack this past spring. Brucato was chairman of the Crosby Pro-Am Executive Committee for four years and had been affiliated with the tournament for 23 years.

Golfers will play in seven divisions according to their handicaps. Grand prize is a week's use of a Lake Tahoe condominium.

Area golf professionals will be on hand to give golf tips and to compete in a closest-to-the-hole shoot-out. For more OHO information or a registration form, call the Central Mission Trails office at 372-0485, 757-6221 or 688-7272.

Italian-accented festival returns Sunday to Monterey

A TRADITION begun in 1935 with the donation of a statue of Santa Rosalia to San Carlos Church will be revived Sunday, Sept. 8 as the Santa Rosalia Festival is again celebrated in Monterey.

A parade replete with floats, bands and marching units will start at 9:30 a.m. on Webster Street and make its way through historical downtown Monterey to the Custom House Plaza.

Fishermen wearing traditional tasselled stocking caps will carry the Statue of Santa Rosalia to the end of Old Fisherman's Wharf, where Bishop Thaddeus Shubsda will embark on a fishing boat where he will ask blessings on the fishing fleet and sportsmen's boats in the harbor.

The Queen of the Santa Rosalia Festival will lay a wreath of flowers in the ocean in memory of fishermen who have died at sea.

Following the blessing of the fleet, at approximately 11:15 a.m., Bishop Shubsda will concelebrate an outdoor Mass. Immediately following the Mass is a lighthearted afternoon of entertainment and serving of Italian food specialties, such as pizza, sausage, spaghetti, fried squid, cannoli and garlic, and other delicacies.

The entertainment includes vocal groups, dancing, bands and other talents. The entire day's program is free except for purchases of food and souvenirs from the many booths.

The Santa Rosalia Festival is preceded on Friday, Sept. 6 by the annual Queen Coronation Ball, a semi-formal dinner-dance during which the Queen of the Festival is selected and crowned. For additional information and reservations, call 372-7887.

The Santa Rosalia Festival is sponsored by the Italian Heritage Society of the Monterey Peninsula.

THE TRADITIONAL Santa Rosalia Festival in Monterey features a morning parade, blessing of the fleet, outdoor mass and an afternoon of live entertainment and Italian food specialties. This year the festival will take place Sunday, Sept. 8.

CET registration planned Saturday

The Children's Experimental Theatre will begin registration for classes on Saturday, Sept. 7 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Indoor Forest Theatre, Santa Rita and Mountain View in Carmel. Classes are open to all children ages six through 18 on a first come, first-served basis.

Under the direction of Marcia Hovick and her staff of theater professionals, students will receive instruction in speech, movement, improvisation, pantomime, stage combat, period costume and history. As a culmination of the year's classwork, each child will perform in the Spring Festival of Plays. These plays are drawn from folk and fairy tales, legends and myths, and classics from Shakespeare, Moliere, the Greeks and others.

CET is committed to developing human beings using the medium of theater to explore the truth about life. Intellectual, historical and personal truths are investigated while theater skills are learned and practiced in a fun and comfortable atmosphere.

The 26-year-old children's theater also sponsors Monterey County's Traveling Troupe which for 20 years has allowed seasoned students from the regular classes to perform for 25,000 children annually in public schools throughout the county free of charge.

For more information about classes, call 624-1531.

Airshow attracts aerial superstars to Salinas

THE LAST time the U.S. Navy Blue Angels came to town the peninsula got treated to an impromptu — if exciting — airshow off the coast.

The Blue Angels and their screaming blue and gold TA-4 Skyhawks will again grace the skies of the county as the featured act in the 1985 California International Airshow, planned Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 7-8 at the Salinas Municipal Airport.

The annual Salinas airshow, one of the premier flying events in the country and a big fundraiser for local charities, also features the Golden Knights, U.S. Army parachute team; Christen Eagles, the nation's top aerobatic team; Joanne Osterud Nottke, one of the top women aerobatic flyers; Bill Warren and the Daring Damsels, an act that features not one, but two wingwalkers; the Acme Duck and Airshow Company, a high-flying comedy act; Bret Willat and his musical sailplane; and for the first time, International Formula Midget air races, featuring former astronaut Donald "Deke" Slaton and 12-time national champion Ray Cote competing on a three-mile oval course.

In addition to the action in the air, there will be a variety of commercial, private and military aircraft on display, from restored antiques to the world's largest flying aircraft, the C-5A Galaxy.

Gates open each day at 8 a.m. with the official program slated to start at 12:30 p.m.

The Blue Angels have been a favorite act at airshows around the world for the past 40 years, demonstrating the power and skills of Navy and Marine Corps pilots for an audience of more than 186 million. Spine-tingling maneuvers, thrilling low-altitude runs, tight formations and spectacular, heart-stopping passes are the stock-in-trade of these highly trained combat pilots who definitely have the "Right Stuff."

Hurtling earthwards at speeds of up to 180 miles per hour, the Golden Knights, one of the world's premier parachute teams and owners of 98 out of a possible 128 international parachuting records, will descend upon the tarmac in front of the grandstand in spectacular fashion, their black and gold chutes billowing behind them.

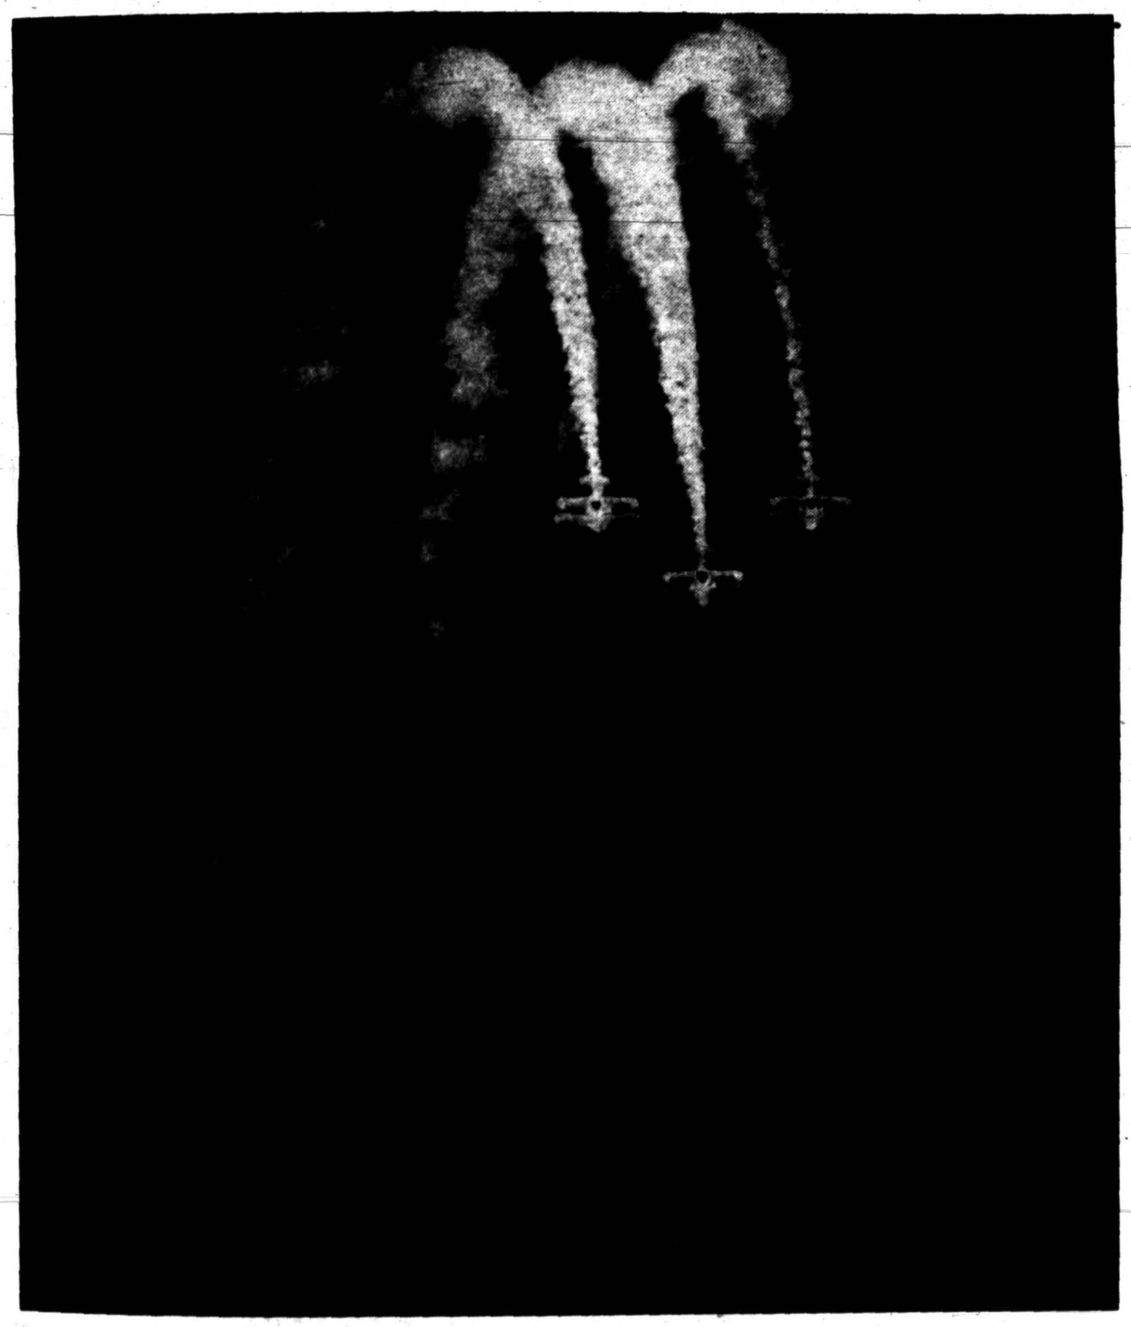

On a smaller scale, but no-less spectacular than the Blue Angels, the Christen Eagles, the top U.S. aerobatic team, will perform their intricate and impressive maneuvers in their factory-prepared Eagle I aircraft.

The only dual wingwalking act in the world will also perform at the airshow: Bill Warren and the Daring Damsels of the Skies, which features two wingwalkers, Cathi Reavis and Connie Warren on the wings of a 1941 Boeing Stearman. Their show concludes with a unique and thrilling "Sitting on the Top of the World," a stunt never performed by any other aviation act.

Joanne Osterud Nottke, a favorite act at airshows for more than 14 years, will guide her Stephens Akro aircraft through an exciting combination daredevil stunts and precision flying, including the stunning "double lomcevak," a maneuver in which the airplane tumbles end over end.

Other major attractions include the Acme Duck and Airshow Company featuring Krashbern T. Throttlebottem and "Ace" the Wonder Dog in the Quacker Smacker J-3 Cub aircraft; the first-ever air races with six to 10 laps of high-speed racing action; and the elegant and graceful performance of Bret Willat in his colorful sailplane.

Grandstand seats are $9 in advance, $12 at the gate; general admission, adults, $6 advance and $8 at the gate; children $3 advance, $4 at the gate. For more information call the California International Airshow at 754-1983.

THE MULTI-award-winning Christen Eagles will perform their acrobatic routinues during the 1985 California International Airshow, planned Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 7-8 at Salinas Airport.

MONTEREY PENINSULA WINERIES

ROBERT TALBOTT VINEYARDS
By Helga Fellay

The Talbott dream of a vineyard in Carmel Valley began turning into reality in the summer of 1982, when the Talbotts met winemaker Ken Wright and found that they shared a philosophy about winemaking: to start a venture with quality in mind, first and foremost.

What led Ken to become a vintner in the Valley?

"I took a pre-law program in Kentucky and put myself through school by working as a waiter. For the first time in my life, I was exposed to good wine. After tasting two wines of the same variety so different, my curiosity was aroused as to why."

This curiosity was to change his life forever. Instead of pursuing law, he went to U.C. Davis to study enology and viticulture. He says he has never regretted it.

"I learn something new every day. It is an honest living. The work is hard, but the rewards are very direct, very satisfying."

Ken foresees an exciting future for Carmel Valley. Because of its climate and soil, the Valley has a tremendous potential for high-quality wine varietals. "The wineries, all small, are all dedicated to excellence above all," he says. "The winemakers are very generous with their knowledge. They are iconoclasts: everyone has his own idea as to what will work, but everyone in the Valley agrees on quality. On the whole, I believe, excellent wines will be produced in the Valley."

What makes Talbott Chardonnay special?

"All our vineyards are planted closely spaced (8x6 spacing, instead of the 12x8 traditional for California). That yields 907.5 vines per acre, twice as intensive as usual. Research has shown that this produces a better balanced and longer-lived wine: for any given amount of sugar, the wine has a lower Ph and higher acid content."

Ken also credits Talbott's unusually labor-intensive approach.

"Grapes are hand-sorted by eight people who do nothing else. Each bunch is inspected and all leaves, unripe, overripe or moldy fruit is removed."

Finally, there is the Talbott emphasis on complexity: "During fermentation, eight different strains of yeast are used in differing percentages, all of them blended later. This creates a complexity of flavors and aromas that we cannot get with one strain. Also, we get our cooperage from different coopers in the Burgundy Forests of France. Some of them use steam when forming the barrels, others use fire only, and these different methods give barrels made from the same wood different flavors. So we are once again able to achieve a complexity in aroma and flavor, a greater finesse in the wine."

This long-awaited 1983 Chardonnay was released on Sept. 1 to a private mailing list only. General release will not be until mid-October, and then only to select restaurateurs and retailers. It can also be purchased by appointment. Write to P.O. Box 267, Carmel Valley, CA 93924 or call (408) 375-0505.

MONTEREY PENINSULA WINERY
By Helga Fellay

Located on the outskirts of the city, Winemaster Roy Thomas considers this to be Monterey's "own" winery, and claims "we are the local folks."

What is a successful Carmel dentist doing among wine presses and [illegible]

"[illegible]," Roy reminisces, "when I was a student at U.C. Med[illegible] San Francisco, I was inspired during a lecture by the [illegible] "Medical Friends of Wine" on the tremendous [illegible] pleasures that can come from wine."

The moment he was initiated into the art of winemaking by friends [illegible] old Italian winemaking families, he was "bitten by the wine [illegible]." The rest is history — that of Monterey Peninsula Winery, now in its 12th year of production.

Today, Roy points proudly to the many medals that adorn the wall of the Winery's beautiful tasting room, especially the double gold medals his Premium Cabernets have won for the past three years. The Winery is also known for its large selection of intense, full-bodied Zinfandels. Its present winemaker, Peter Watson Graf — winemaker at Chalone Vineyards for the past seven years — will bring renewed emphasis to the winery's Chardonnay, Pinot Blanc and Pinot Noir. Ask for these fine varietals by name in all finer local shops and better restaurants, or go for a quick drive to the winery in the Old Stonehouse by the airport.

The winery also produced a good generic wine known simply as Big Sur Red and Big Sur White. It was formerly sold under a label just as unpretentious as its name, but Betsy Brown Nuckton, wife of Roy's partner Deryck Nuckton, was embarrassed to serve it because of its "funky" label. The problem was remedied. Now adorned with its new "Yuppie" label, the "new" Big Sur White has become presentable even in polite society.

For many years, a wine appreciation class has been taught at the winery every Wednesday evening at 7:30. It has been so successful with locals that many of its "graduate students" keep coming back year after year, and somehow manage to avoid final graduation. If interested in joining the class, call Don Marks at 659-2909.

The tasting room in the beautiful Old Stonehouse with its 5½ foot-thick limestone walls and its cobweb-laden rafters is vaguely reminiscent of a Gothic castle. It is open daily from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. As many as 20 different wines may be tasted on a given day. Come and enjoy the fine wines, or even a picnic lunch beside the lilypond. The Winery is located just 1½ miles east of Monterey Airport on the Monterey-Salinas Highway, Route 68. For information call (408) 372-4949.

THE MONTEREY VINEYARD
By Karl Kelley

The Monterey Vineyard makes only vintage-dated table wines from varietal grapes grown entirely in Monterey County. The winery's renowned Classic wines are vintage blends of these same coastal varietals. In certain years, when conditions are right, The Monterey Vineyard makes small amounts of Special Selection wines, such as Botrytis dessert wines.

Dry, barrel-aged varietals include Chardonnay, Pinot Blanc and Fume Blanc.

Medium dry varietals include Chenin Blanc, Johannisberg Riesling, Gewurztraminer, White Zinfandel and Thanksgiving Riesling.

Classic varietal blends include "Classic Red" (a vintage blend of Cabernet Sauvignon, Zinfandel and Pinot Noir), "Classic White" (a vintage blend of Pinot Blanc, Chardonnay, Chenin Blanc and Grey Riesling), and "Classic Rose" (a vintage blend of Grenache, Cabernet Sauvignon, Napa Gamay and Grey Riesling).

SMITH AND HOOK
By Helga Fellay

"A commitment to Cabernet" is the slogan of Smith & Hook, a beautiful wine estate perched on the eastern slope of the Santa Lucia Mountains, with breathtaking views of the Salinas Valley and Gavilan Mountains.

Seventy percent of the Smith & Hook quality is due to the vineyard, at least according to viticulturist Steve McIntyre.

"You can make bad wine from good grapes, but not good wine from bad grapes," he quips.

The problem with early Monterey County Reds was that they had a "vegi" flavor. Smith & Hook ended the problem by chance and through research and experimentation.

"Only one of our two wells designed to feed into the irrigation system came to be," says McIntyre. "This caused the vines to lack water during part of the growing season."

But lo and behold: the berries from the "deprived" vines produced a superior, more complex wine.

"Through continued experimentation, careful tending, and harvesting sometimes as late as November, we have found over the years that 'stressing the vine' late in the season results in a smaller crop, but produces a wine with more intensity and more flavor," he says. This past year, Smith & Hook has earned seven awards for its Premium Cabernet.

Smith & Hook, long known to produce only one label, has recently added a second label: Polo, a 1983 Cabernet.

Steve explains: "We have vineyard capacity for 30,000 cases of cabernet, but we are only marketing 10,000 cases. In the past, we sold our grapes to other wineries. Now, we have decided to utilize more of our own grapes. Because all Smith & Hook Cabernets are made from carefully hand-picked and hand-sorted berries, grapes for the Polo Cabernet are processed at larger wineries where production is more cost-effective. This wine is then brought back to Smith & Hook for blending and bottling. The new Polo has been well-received. It is a ready-to-drink, somewhat lighter style cabernet, and retails for $4.00 to $4.50 per bottle.

The rustic winery, which had once been a stable and housed quarterhorses, is not far from Soledad Mission. It is open for tasting daily from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There are picnic grounds, and for the rainy season, about 24 people can picnic indoors in a more than 100-year old building with views of the Salinas Valley. The winery is a short, scenic drive away from Monterey. Follow Route 68 towards Salinas, turn right on River Road, right on Foothill Road, right opposite the school. Write: Smith & Hook, 37700 Foothill Rd., Soledad, CA 93960, or call (408) 678-2132. VISA and M/C accepted.

DURNEY VINYARD
By Helga Fellay

It was a 100-year-old Zinfandel vine found on his Rancho Del Sueno — Ranch of Dreams — in upper Carmel Valley that gave William Durney the idea that grapes would grow there. He had professors from U.C. Davis come out to have a look at the area. "Yes," they said, "it would do quite well." They recommended he plant two acres and see what happens. So he planted 20 acres, not wanting to do things in a small way. That was in 1968. By 1972, 86 acres had been planted, and Durney Vineyards became known for the excellence of its award-winning 100 percent varietal vintage wines.

Durney produces only 14,000 cases a year, and plans to increase production up to 25,000 cases.

"That's as big as we're going to get," says winemaker David Sharp. "This way, the winemaker never loses touch and control."

David had been a mechanical engineer for two years when he found that doing the same thing day after day was not for him. He wanted new challenges, different things to do. Since wine collecting and home winemaking had been a hobby for some six years, he went back to Fresno State to study enology and viticulture. After two years at United Vintners — "too large for me," says Dave — he found his niche at Durney in 1980.

David credits Carmel Valley's unique climate as well as technique for the excellence of Durney Cabernet. Protected by surrounding mountains, the Upper Valley enjoys hot days and cool nights during the summer. This promotes good color in red grapes and good acidity in both white and red grapes. It also means an exceptionally long growing season, with harvesting up to mid-November. This allows the grape to mature, do develop more flavor and more character. Also, soil conditions associated with hillside vineyards and dry-farming result in less foliage, smaller clusters and smaller berries. This, too, means more intense flavor and color.

"Because of that," Dave says, "our Cabernet never has the herbaceous (or "vegi") character for which the early Monterey County wines used to be known. Our Cabernet is a full-bodied wine, with intense, flavor, color and tannin, a wine that ages well."

Next to Cabernet, Chenin Blanc is Durney's biggest seller. With 1.2% residual sugar, balanced by high acidity, it makes an excellent lunch and dinner wine. In 1984, Durney also began producing Chardonnay, scheduled to be released commercially in the fall of 1986.

In 1985, because of less rainfall, berries are a lot smaller, resulting in even more varietal intensity. According to winemaker David Sharp, "1985 is going to be a very good year!" Carmel Valley, CA 93924; (408) 625-5433.

MORGAN — ST. VRAIN

Few places in the world can excite one's senses as fully as Monterey County. Fog and sun, sea and stone...the elements which lend to much beauty and contrast to this area...are the same elements which contribute to the distinctive quality of Monterey County Chardonnay. Inspired by the quality of Chardonnay from this area, Morgan Winery was established in 1982.

Morgan Chardonnay is a fine example of what the cool, coastal growing conditions of Monterey County and traditional winemaking methods can produce. The wine utilizes two superb vineyards in Monterey County. The cooler and more northern vineyard is Hillside, located on the west bench of the Sierra de Salinas near Gonzales. From this vineyard, the wine receives its structure — the ample acidity and varietal fruit that serves as its backbone. Cobblestone Vineyard is located further south in the Arroyo Seco area near Greenfield. This well-drained, warmer vineyard gives the wine a rich and buttery character. The blending of wines from these two vineyards accentuates the best in their individual charcteristics, and produces a Chardonnay which is multi-faceted and complex.

The winery has enjoyed great success with its wines. The Morgan Chardonnays have received a Gold Medal from the 1983 Los Angeles County Fair, a Gold Medal from the Third Annual Los Angeles Wine Festival, and the American Champion award in a taste-off between gold medal winning Chardonnays. The St. Vrain Sauvignon Blanc was recently awarded a Gold Medal at the 1985 Orange County Fair.

MUSIC CORNER

BY JO ANN LA TORRA

Bright brass at the Basilica

A BRASS QUINTET made up of the resident brass faculty at Hidden Valley presented a pair of concerts at the Mission Basilica last weekend. Unfortunately, I could only hear one, Sunday, Sept. 1, and it was splendid.

It is a wonderful experience to hear brass at the Basilica, because one can feel the sound go by. Too much listening in fashionably dry halls makes one forget the physical sensation of sound.

Ingolf Dahl's excellent Music for Brass Instruments was the high point of the concert. It is always a treat to hear contemporary music here, even that in a conservative vein. Dahl was a thoughtful composer, and the piece was well designed to show off the instruments individually as well as to exploit different possibilities of ensemble.

The first movement was full of contrast — dynamic, rhythmic, textural. With its extensive use of dissonant counterpoint, it was somewhat reminiscent of Hindemith. The second movement was based on a fanfare-like figure, functioning in the overall scheme as a kind of scherzo. The last movement featured majestic chords, building to a massive, thrilling finale. The last chord, again like Hindemith, was a major triad.

Also contemporary was a Suite for Brass by Leonard Lebow, previously unknown to me, but apparently alive and well. Also in three movements, it showed some jazz influence in the parallel successions of seventh chords; some Broadway influence in melodic lines and rhythms; some J.P. Sousa in the finale. It's a pleasant pieces, not great by a long shot, but worth a hearing.

Moving backward, the late 19th century was represented by the Russian civil engineer, Victor Ewald, a popular composer with brass quintets. Also pleasant music, it nevertheless tends to be repetitive as though Ewald couldn't think of what to do with an idea other than repeat it.

Two 17th century composers, Samuel Scheidt and Johann Pezel, and J.S. Bach completed the program.

The five players represent four internationally recognized symphonies: Charles Schlueter (trumpet) from the Boston Symphony; Ronald Hasselmann (trumpet) from the Minnesota Orchestra; Philip Myers (French horn) and Warren Deck (tuba) from the New York Philharmonic; Glenn Dodson (trombone) from the Philadelphia Orchestra. As one would expect, the playing was of a very high caliber. The ensemble was consistently solid, and technical miscues were few and far between. As a group, they lacked the finesse, of say, the Empire Brass Quintet, but it must be remembered that they do not play together all the time.

The later music was well-presented and was, in general, very satisfactory. The Baroque pieces were not on such firm ground. Part of the problem there was the instruments themselves. Baroque brass instruments were quite different, not having valves, and with a lighter, clearer tone. For the trumpets, this is not too much of a problem, but for the lower brass it is. The lines tend to sound muddy, especially given the live sound at the Basilica. Because the later music was played on the instruments for which it was written, the composer had figured out the acoustical problems — as had the Baroque composers for their situations.

Stylistically, the Baroque pieces were not treated differently from the more modern ones. Extremes of dynamics, quite impossible on Baroque instruments, were in constant use.

The Scheidt Canzona came off well, in spite of these problems. The group managed to convey the spirit of the piece and keep it alive. The Pezel pieces, actually a dance suite, suffered from the players not knowing the character, hence the proper tempos, of the dances. It would have been very hard to guess what dance was being played.

Three contrapuncti from The Art of the Fugue, which is attaining hit parade status here, closed the program. This totally abstract music sounds wonderful by a brass quintet, and they obviously enjoyed playing it. One might disagree with the phrasing, dynamics and tempos, but the effect was good.

The audience tried hard to get an encore, but reason prevailed. It was a well-planned, well-executed concert and needed nothing more to be complete.

The New Forum celebrates its first anniversary

In celebration of its first year of activity in examining the alternatives to nuclear war, New Forum of Carmel will present author and lecturer Harold Willens.

Active in the issue of peace and the nuclear arms race, Willens has served as national chairman of the Businessman's Educational Fund, was a member of the President's Commission of White House Fellowships and served on the U.S. Delegation of the United Nations Special Session on Disarmament.

In addition, he is the founder, board member and senior advisor to the Center for Defense Information in Washington, D.C., co-founder of the Interfaith Center to Reverse the Arms Race and state chairman of the 1982 California Bilateral Nuclear Weapons Freeze Initiative.

Author of the book The Trimtab Factor: How Business Executives Can Help Solve the Nuclear Weapons Crisis, Willens asserts that the people of the United States can serve as a "trimtab," a small, adjustable force that when concentrated can exert an inordinate power in effecting a change of direction.

Willens was the speaker at The New Forum's inaugural meeting and now returns for "An Anniversary Update: The Need for a New Foreign Policy" on Sept. 9 at The Lodge at Pebble Beach.

Reservations for the noon luncheon are $13 and must be made in advance by contacting the New Forum at P.O. Box 5595, Carmel, 93921 or by calling May Waldroup at 624-1803.

Braude named to Friends internship

Claire Braude of San Diego has been appointed to a one-year editorial/curatorial internship with the Friends of Photography. Braude is the first full-time intern in the organization's editorial program.

In her position at The Friends, Braude will assist with all functions of the editorial and curatorial programs. She will also have major responsibility for the completion of a specific project. The internship program, which is expected to continue on an annual basis to provide experience for individuals entering the museum field, is funded, in part, by a grant from the Museum Program of the National Endowment for the Arts.

Braude comes to The Friends from the San Diego Museum of Art, where she worked in publicity and education since February. Prior to that position she served as a public relations intern at the Museum of Photographic Arts in San Diego.

She has also worked at both the Minneapolis Institute of Arts and the Minnesota Museum of Art, and served as a production assistant for local programming at a Minneapolis-based television station.

For more information, contact David Featherstone or Julia Nelson-Gal at 624-6330.

Museum orchestrates plan to battle monetary pinch

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Museum of Art Association is "pinched for cash" and is now organizing fund-raising projects, according to Museum Association President Morgan Flagg.

Fund-raising events and donations from members will solve the problem, Flagg predicted. Immediate efforts include the museum association's upcoming Better Than Usual Sale on Saturday, Sept. 14 and the annual Festival of Trees, planned Dec. 5 through 8 at the Monterey Fairgrounds. The museum association's fund-raising auxiliary, the Jesters, is also scheduling social events.

The Better Than Usual Sale, which will take place from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sept. 14, provides a portion of the operating budget which allows the museum association to collect, preserve and display traditional and contemporary artwork.

The Festival of Trees, which includes a display of 30 Christmas trees decorated with ornaments hand-made by museum volunteers, also funds the exhibitions and activities held in the museum.

"The autumn months after the summer lull are an important time for the museum in that this is when our biggest fund-raisers occur. Our Better Than Usual Sale in September and our Festival of Trees fund-raiser in December provide a substantial part of our operating budget — but that doesn't tell the entire story," Flagg said recently.

"Fund-raising takes a lot of effort and energy. We have, in the past, aroused the community and the community has responded very well by helping us get a newer and larger museum which has been used to present a lot of marvelous exhibitions. Our rapid growth during the last few years, however, has brought two new related problems: our image of financial success and a lull in community giving," he continued.

The museum, he explained, has been incorrectly perceived as "a fat cat because of our expanded programs and services." The situation actually is quite different, according to Flagg.

"Our budget has increased every year to reflect the fact that everything costs more, but we are now finding that we are not funding our programs sufficiently. A lull in our normal fund-raising efforts over the summer has, furthermore, left us with negative cash flow," he said.

In spite of this problem, the museum association has continued its program of mounting a variety of touring art exhibitions — more than 30 in 1985 — while also continuing the Museum on Wheels program, which takes folk art to students in Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties. This program serves as many students' first "museum experience," Museum Director Thomas J. Logan has noted.

Further expenditures have been made to support the extended education program. That program, which provides art education classes, has been attracting more students than ever before, Flagg said.

Donations from supporters in the community as well as income from the upcoming fund-raisers, however, are needed so the museum association can continue all these efforts, according to Flagg. Creation of an endowment fund, however, is needed for the long-term success of the museum, he added.

"We have, I suppose, become so successful that people think we don't need donations anymore. That's not true. Those donations have been the backbone of our existence in the past and we need this help for the future. We haven't had a major fund-raising drive since the building project was completed two years ago; we can't sit back on our laurels for two years and expect to keep going," he explained.

whether budgetary or personnel problems, or merely that the orchestra must be improved. When you're hired to do the job these problems are presented to you.

"I like to think of the symphony like a government. You have three parts: the orchestra, the board and management, and the conducting staff. It's a series of checks and balances. What I seek is to maintain an equal balance between all of these facets."

Environmental views spark new Friends exhibit

AN EXHIBITION of photographs by Chris Rainier and David Stephenson that offers separate views of two international environmental situations opens in The Friends Gallery on Friday, Sept. 6, and continues through Oct. 13.

Rainer will present a lecture about his work at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 6 in Room 20 of Carmel's Sunset Center. An opening reception for the exhibition will follow in the gallery. The gallery is open every afternoon from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m.

The Camera and the Environment presents the work of two artists whose photographs have been shown in museums and galleries as well as in environmentally specific exhibitions. Stephenson, a resident of Australia since 1982, has photographed the wild rivers on the west coast of the island of Tasmania. The photographs selected for this exhibition include 20-by-60-inch triptychs that depict the changes made in the wilderness by the construction of hydro-electric projects, and multi-panel montages of wilderness forest land.

His photographs are formal images that clearly fall within the traditions of contemporary landscape photography, yet the lakes and rivers they depict have been the subject of recent ecological battles. Many of the prints are visually apolitical, and might be used with equal success to support the claims of activist groups fighting to save the Tasmanian wilderness and to illustrate the annual reports of the dam-builders. Although Stephenson's personal concerns lie with the environmentalists, through the neutrality of his photographs he hopes to engage viewers more actively, and allow them to make their own value judgments about the changing landscape.

Upon first viewing, Chris Rainier's photographs from his Ladakh Photographic Project are less clearly concerned with environmental issues; however, they are informed by a human, as well as global, view of ecological development. Ladakh, a series of valleys in the Himalayas in the northwest corner of India bordering on Tibet, was isolated from the influences of Western culture until the mid-1970s. The combination of a survival economy, a way of life richly infused with Buddhist rituals and a barren and desolate landscape has created a fragile traditional culture that will certainly be altered with increased outside contact.

These detailed view-camera photographs, which Rainier made during the summer of 1984, explore the Ladakhi culture through a series of portraits, landscapes and studies of Buddhist inscriptions. Like Stephenson's photographs, they neither advocate preservation of the traditional way of life nor promote achievement of a higher standard of living through progress. Yet, in portraits such as that of a young Buddhist monk wearing a digital watch, there is an awareness of the inevitability of change; and in pictures of prayer flags and rock inscriptions there is an appreciation of the special qualities of the world's indigenous — and disappearing — cultures.

Born in Canada in 1958, Chris Rainier graduated from Brooks Institute in Santa Barbara in 1980. He served as assistant to Ansel Adams, and for the Ansel Adams Studio, from 1981 to 1985. He has been associated with the photographic projects for a number of environmental organizations.

In 1983 he assisted with the production of the Introduction to the World Conservation Strategy, which was sponsored by the International Union of Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources (IUCN) and the World Wildlife Fund. Now traveling widely, including a recent extended photographic trip in the ethnic areas of China, Rainier lives on the Monterey Peninsula.

David Stephenson was born in 1955 in Washington, D.C. He received his B.F.A. degree from the University of Colorado in 1979 and his M.F.A. from the University of New Mexico in 1982. He received a Photographer's Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts in 1980. Stephenson is presently a lecturer in photography and department head at the University of Tasmania School of Art in Hobart.

For more information, call 624-6330.

Justin Stone's works highlighted

An art exhibit by Carmel painter Justin Stone will open with a reception in Cherry Hall at 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 7. Stone works in acrylic on canvas and watercolor and ink on rice paper. He is self-taught and describes his work as nonobjective. A former composer and arranger, he maintains there is an affinity between sound and color. This is his fourth one-man show.

Stone was a member of the New York stock exchange, a lecturer at the University of New Mexico and has published seven books on metaphysics. He has lived in China, Japan and India and originated T'ai Chi Chih (joy through movement) which has spread world-wide.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Carl Cherry Foundation and can be viewed through Sept. 25. For further information, call the foundation at 624-7491.
